Bonus Bill, Unamended, Speeds To Passage With Opposition Dwindling

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—The S. Order Bill will be amended speedily to avoid the possibility of a veto, it is learned. Although the bill is not yet introduced, it is expected that it will be introduced by Senator Smith and other members of the Republican majority. It is evident that the President will veto the bill if it is introduced in its present form. It is therefore expected that the bill will be amended to remove the objectionable provisions. # ANOTHER "MYSTERY" MURDER STIRS THE LOS ANGELES CROWD

Archie and Audrey had been committed to Los Angeles Jail for their wealthy Los Angeles and Midway manufacturing wife and mother-in-law, and they were placed at the side of the unfixed name of William Donald Wood and others. On Tuesday we found out that when another fatal by the cause of his wife broke into the house in October when we were locked up in a dark way, but the authorities indicated that the murder would probably be an only attempt to go down a well known drug man in his life as the law later on in front of the home on Monday the night of the murder were impossible to recall.

Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. John Collins, Linn Irish leader, was to have been married to Kitty Keenan, of County Longford on the very day a rebel bullet cut short his life. It was learned today. The Free State chieftain, whose remains were honored by a sorrowing nation as they lay in state here today, had frequently postponed consummation of his wartime romance with the patriot Irish girl who had once saved his life. They had decided they must wait until the fight was won but had finally left August 23rd as the conflict day.

Strongly denounced having attended the convention which was raided by Federal operative and State troops.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 23.—Ten men have been held in the county jail here charged with the wholesale booting of freight cars on the New York Central line at the railroad yard in Huron and Cleveland.

The men were given preliminary hearings on Tuesday and were bound to appear in court with $10,000 bail each. At the time it was said to be impossible to find a lawyer and who was out of the jail for the appearance of the public defender failed to appear when summoned, called and allowed a lawyer from justice.

The four men named in the information filed by the chief of the New York Central detectives, are Henry J. Kravitz, of 14 Durbin street, Cleveland; Peter L. Linn, of 1414 Cleveland avenue, Cleveland; R. Lee of Cleveland Heights; and the man who jumped the train.

They are all said to have disposed of the quantities of stolen rubber, and the men were taken from the loaded freight car by a local dealer named "Doc" Derol, of Cleveland, at the grand jury on Monday.

It is hereby agreed by and between the Officers of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania, and the Central Coal Association, that the working agreement terminating March 31st, 1922, is hereby renewed and extended to March 31st, 1923, in all of its provisions as to wages and working conditions, except that part of Rule 25 reading as follows.

"In the event of a new scale agreement not having been signed on or before March 31st, 1922, then and in that event the U M W. of A. of District No. 2 will continue all men in mines regularly at work under the wages and conditions of this agreement for an additional thirty days after the date on which the Scale Committees of the operators and miners hold their first meeting for the purpose of negotiating a scale to succeed this present scale. On reaching an agreement to succeed this present contract the wages paid by the operators to the miners dating from April 1st, 1922, for such portion of the thirty days work as extend beyond April 1st, 1922, shall be those that are agreed to in the next contract."

An extraordinary locomotive, "No. 8000," which is expected to prove a most important contribution to motive power progress, has just been put in service on the Michigan Central Railroad of the New York Central Lines.

Attracting widespread attention from the public press, it has been popularly described as "the mystery engine," because it was built in secret at the Lima Locomotive Works at Lima, Ohio, and was known to but a handful of men directly concerned until it made its appearance ready for heavy freight duty at Detroit the past month.

The new locomotive in general appearance presents striking departures from the familiar features of the ordinary locomotive, and in numerous details of its design and construction it is just as different from any predecessor as its looks indicate.

The new locomotive was planned and constructed under the personal direction of President A. H. Smith of the New York Central Lines, who specified the several most important main accomplishments to be sought by the new design and made provision for the use of every up to date improvement of proved worth, brought to the last degree of refinement for economy and efficiency. The engine is of Mikado type, but contains numerous features never before incorporated in any locomotive.

Meets Expectations

Locomotive 8000, in its preliminary tests and subsequent daily service hauling heavy trains between Detroit and Toledo has performed in a way highly satisfactory to the New York

Central officials and the Lima builders.

In its initial road test, it hauled 100 heavily laden coal cars and lately easily pulled a train of 140 coal-laden cars more than 9,000 tons of coal, indicating a capacity of more than 150 cars and load in excess of 12,000 tons.

A great stir was caused at Detroit when one locomotive hauled thirty box cars loaded with slaves upon the opening of the Michigan Central Road Line, October 3, 1888, the contract with the performance of "8000" indicating the great strides in motive power in the past thirty-four years.

Summed up, Locomotive 8000 is considered the best work in efficiency and economy in freight motive power. These are its principal marks:

- (1) For its weight, it will deliver more power than any locomotive of the world.
- (2) It will exert more tractive effort per ton of coal consumed than any locomotive ever built.
- (3) It will prove a locomotive easier to operate and repair than predecessors thus making for a quick turn around and safety.

Locomotive 8000 was designed and built to expedite the movement of heavy freight trains such as refrigerator train intrusted with perishables. With an increase in weight of less than two per cent it compared with the heaviest Mikados in service on the Michigan Central. No. 8000 has an increase of nearly eight per cent in tractive power derived from the forward cylinders and a

Miners Will Return To Work On The Old Scale Which Was In Effect When Strike Started

The bituminous coal strike, so far as District No. 2, embracing the mine operations in this section of Pennsylvania is concerned, was settled at 10:30 last night in the Altoona conference when the sub-scale committee representing the mine leaders of the local district accepted an agreement presented by Charles O'Neill, secretary of the Central Coal association, which had already been voted upon favorably by the sub-scale committee of seven men representing the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Pennsylvania and the Central Coal association. The agreement as presented by the operators had been argued over for more than six hours during the afternoon and evening by the mine leaders, three sessions being held before final acceptance came and the joint conference with the operators' sub scale committee.

According to the agreement, the miners will resume their work immediately at the wage scale with all its provisions that was in effect at the time of the walkout, with the exception of a portion of Rule 25 having to do with their working thirty days after the first scale meeting between their leaders and the operators and adjustment of pay after April 1 on to the new scale. The new agreement, signed last night, will be effective until March 31, 1923, and is strictly a district agreement. The check-off system will remain in force and there is no reference to the Cleveland conference or agreement in the agreement signed, thus it is distinctly a district agreement with advantages to increase of over 26 per cent when its locomotive "booster" is cut in. The "booster" has the effect of turning the trailer wheels into driving wheels.

The designers of this locomotive in addition to securing the greatest possible tractive effort with a minimum weight at which strength would not be lost, have incorporated the following features and devices for economy in the use of fuel and water. A superheater of new development has been applied which produces a higher temperature of steam than the type of superheaters in general use.

Until the invention of the "booster," the engine trailer wheels have merely carried the weight of the back end of the engine. The "booster" is an auxiliary engine geared to the trailer axle and is cut in and cut out either automatically or by the engineer as the occasion requires. On Locomotive 8000 a tractive effort of 74,500 pounds is obtainable. Of this figure 11,000 pounds are delivered by the booster. The remaining 63,500 are obtained from the forward cylinders.

Refinements in design and the use of alloy of steel and hollow axles and crank pins have made it possible to eliminate a great amount of weight ordinarily necessary. The weight of the locomotive, exclusive of tender, is 334,000 pounds. The tender, which has a capacity of 10,000 gallons of water and sixteen tons of coal, weighs 199,700 pounds. The boiler carries 200 pounds of steam. The main cylinders are 28 inches in diameter, with 30-inch stroke. The diameter of the driving wheels is 63 inches.

For the first time in the history of American railroading superheated steam is used to operate the air pump, feed-water pump, booster engine and headlight turbo generator. Instead of the customary injector, a feed-water pump takes the water from the tender and forces it through a heater into the boiler, the heat for the heater being obtained from the exhaust steam. The condenser of which is returned to the boiler through a filter, which eliminates any oil which may have been carried over from the cylinders into the exhaust steam.

The feed-water heater is located at the front of the engine, above the headlight and near the top of the tank, so as to give the condensate a fine line plenty of fall to return the condensed water to the filter on the rear of the tender. The heater is a jacket mounted in place of the left side of the smoke-box on the boiler.

Another important departure from standard railway practice is the feature of superheating the steam before it reaches the main throttle. In Locomotive 8000 the steam from the boiler passes through the steam dome into the dry pipe and thence to the superheater units, the dry pipe, which is outside of the boiler, being connected at the forward end direct to the superheater.

Before the steam leaves the dome it is passed through a separator which collects any water that may be carried in the steam, the water being automatically returned to the boiler, which, together with the taking of steam from the highest possible point of boiler, insures absolutely dry steam of unusually high temperature. From the superheated steam passages in the heater, the superheated steam is conveyed to the throttle, the location of which is in what might be termed a throttle-box which is on top of the smoke-box and just forward of the smoke stack, another unusual departure from existing designs and practice and calculation get the steam to the cylinders from the throttle in the most direct way possible.

Careful attention has been given to the application of devices to facilitate handling the locomotive by engineers, the special equipment consisting of power reverse gear, automatic stoker and an automatic grate-blanking device which shortens the time the engine must spend over ash pits. The interior arrangement of the cab is such that the engineer and fireman can perform the necessary duties in connection with the operation of the engine with minimum of movement from their positions on either side of the cab, the physical effort of each being practically nil. Even the blowing of the whistle is pneumatically operated, an air valve being located near the side of the cab and immediately in front of the engineer.

As is customary on the Michigan Central, the engine is equipped with water scoop, which eliminates stops and consequent delays for taking water.

Before being put into service, the engine was inspected by President Smith, Vice-President E. D. Bronner and General Manager Henry Shreve of the Michigan Central Railroad, who were well pleased and expressed themselves as delighted with what had been accomplished by the designers and builders and predicted a performance by this locomotive heretofore unexpected on any railroad.

Locomotive 8000 has more than lived up to expectations in the short time it has been in service. When it has been in service a sufficient length of time dynamometer tests will be taken and results very definitely determined.

Progress in motive power development is more than ever a struggle for heavier tonnage-haul capacity with the greatest fuel economy possible and minimum operating and maintenance costs. The factor of safety is a dominating one in all considerations.

During and immediately after the war, the railroads were taxed to their utmost to keep the power then in use in operation. So depleted was the motive power of American railroads at the termination of Federal control that immediate embarkation on a program of rehabilitation and replacement was necessary on the part of the roads which sustained the heaviest burdens of the war. The situation was such that little or no time was to be had for change of design or study for improvement, the problem being for complete concentration on the maintenance of the power equipment on the rails and keeping up of replacements as far as possible. Then came the business depression which was first felt in the fall of 1920.

A breathing spell was had and is looking forward to renewal of business activity and the meeting of future motive power requirements "progress" and "advancement" again became the key words of the railroad engineers and the locomotive builders. Increasing the efficiency of motive power necessarily limited to broad-gauge width, divisional clearances and bridge-load capacities by a revival of intensive development was the goal sought.

Engine 8000 seems to be a notable stride forward in the solution of these problems. (New York Central Lines Magazine.)

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Clearfield may not be as big a place as the great Buckeye State of Ohio, but our babies can more than compensate favorably with any others found out in that benighted middle west country. You don't have to take our word for it. Listen to this: Clearfield, Pa., Aug. 22, '22

I notice in last night's Progress item on the Ohio Healthiest Baby. She is 26 months old, weighs 27 lbs., 33 1/2 inches tall and has 16 teeth. I wonder what the same doctors would think of some of our Clearfield babies. Here is one of them.

She is 26 months old, weighs 31 1/2 lbs., 36 1/2 inches tall and has 20 teeth. And her name is Margaret Bell Gray and she thrives on The Home Bakery Products.

Respectfully yours
Z. E. GRAY.

This clipping from the editorial columns of the Monterey Press of Monterey, Nuevo Leon, Mexico is too good to pass up:

AN APOLOGY
This paper last week published a story in which it said that Dr. Rudson whom it took to task for medical care given a patient, would make a good horse doctor.

During the week, Dr. Rudson called at the office of the Press, and demanded that we retract the statement saying that he was a good doctor. We do, and have much pleasure in saying to our readers that Dr. Rudson is not a good horse doctor.

A local resident who does not favor Col. Max Kuhn's drive against the dogs requests that we publish the following classic in "dogology."

The "Eulogy on the Dog", one of the most famous speeches ever made by the late Senator George G. Vest of Missouri, says the Kansas City "Times," was made in the course of a trial of a man who had wantonly shot a dog belonging to a neighbor. Vest represented the plaintiff, who demanded $200 damages. When Vest finished speaking, the jury, after two minutes' deliberation, awarded the plaintiff $500. The full text of the speech follows:

"Gentlemen of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us, may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is the dog—Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies and, when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in its embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even in death."

There should be a veritable Thanksgiving in this region of Pennsylvania today. After a period of idleness, during which time thousands of dollars in wages have been lost, families have suffered privations, children the comforts which are their birthrights, peace again reigns in the soft coal field known as District No. 2.

It is exceptionally gratifying that District No. 2 is to retain its identity as one of the factors in the soft coal industry and under the agreement made the miners and operators of this district are left free to take advantage of a district agreement in the future. President Brophy of the United Mine Workers is to be congratulated in being broad minded enough to see that the welfare of the operators in this matter of district agreements is the welfare of the miners as well.

A lot of fellows are taking a lot of the joy out of the prospect of prosperity in this region right now by trying to figure out to whom the victory belongs. To our mind there is no victory for anybody. Suffice it to say that the miners retain everything they had when the strike took place. Both have retained the benefits to accrue to the coal industry in this region through district bargaining. We can see nothing that either side has won to crow about but both have lost so much that they will do well to remember the strike of 1922 when they meet to formulate scale next spring.

AMERICANS, HOME BUILDERS.

Home building and construction in general for the first six months of 1922 has eclipsed all previous records. The Keystone State has 2,200,000 families, according to the last census, and 1,700,000 are home owners, outranking all other States, with Ohio second. This has been brought about without the semblance of a building boom. No better evidence of thrift is needed. The man who builds himself a home is building for the future, and the man who owns his home is generally found in the ranks of good citizens. His thrift and energy supply others with the things which make life worth living.

According to the figures of one of the statistical bureaus, during the last six months the total amount of work let for residential construction in this country was 682,663,000, an increase of 89 per cent over last year; $228,932,000 for public works and utilities, 19 per cent increase; $280,329,000 for business buildings, 58 per cent increase, and $123,181,000 for industrial plants, an increase of 42 per cent. America is fast becoming a nation of home owners.

We'll agree to this. A Punsutawney business man remarked that he thought every decent motorist should be allowed to carry a gun. "The other night my wife was going out the Indiana road in her coupe and just as she was making the curve before reaching the Irv North home, some fool tried to pass her just as she was driving by another car coming up the hill in the opposite direction. He made the rifle, but struck the wheels of my wife's car and came very near upsetting her over the bank. The fool driver never looked back, just scooted.

"I would have loved to have been in the car with my wife with a nice, big gatling gun nestling in my hand. I would have drilled a hole in every square inch of the machine ahead of me. A quart of that guy's blood would have made a lovely drink for me this morning."

Everyone seems to know what a fair price would be for the other fellow's goods.

A ban on spooning on a moonlight night would get more support if it ever had been discovered that moonlight had any other purposes.

An American hired to boost the value of the ruble would begin by printing advertisements on the under side of Lenin's paper currency. Good idea.

"THE OLD HOME TOWN"

FOR THE EYES OF POSTERITY

Satisfactory Way Said to Have Been Found to Preserve Newspapers for Indefinite Period.

How to so pickle newspapers that they can be preserved indefinitely in the public libraries is a problem which has apparently been solved, according to the American Paper and Pulp Association.

Eight years of experimenting, participated in by three big New York newspapers at a cost of $5,000 a year each, under the supervision of the New York public library, has taught librarians how to preserve for posterity newspaper files. The solution seems simple, being the mounting of each newspaper sheet between two sheets of thin Japanese tissue, shutting the air from the original sheets, reducing its acidity but slightly, and strengthening the paper. Bound volumes of the mounted pages are now in constant daily use, and are free from the wear and tear which destroyed the untreated newspapers.

The New York experiments have been so successful that a big Western newspaper has sent representatives to New York to study and adopt the practice for use there.

The first investigation was made in Boston, and the library there tried to persuade the newspapers to print library editions on an extra paper, but the expense was too great. This is now done by a London paper, and was tried by a Brooklyn paper, but the cost was prohibitive.

In the New York experiments silk was first used, but the Japanese tissue was found the best for the purpose, as it hermetically sealed the newspaper pages from the air. Shellacs, varnishes and other substances were tried with little success. Under the method now in use the operator wets a glass or steel-covered table, lays down a sheet of tissue, with the pasting machine, rice paste is put on, then in turn the newspaper page, paste and tissue, when the page is dried and pressed under a gasheated mangle.

CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY

Precipitate Individual Foresaw Hard Task in Squaring Himself With His Fellow Citizens.

Glad in knickerbockers and driving home from college two girls stopped at Noblesville. While there they went into the library.

When they came out into the street, most of the town was out to see them. Deciding that knickerbockers must not be the thing in Noblesville, they hurried to get under the shelter of their car.

A man came up to them and invited them to stay longer as guests of the town. They refused, saying that they were in a hurry to get to Warsaw.

"Warsaw?" he stammered. "Why aren't you the two girls who are burning your way from New York to Indianapolis, and whose picture was in the paper this afternoon? We have been expecting two girls all day and as soon as I saw you go into the library I thought you were the ones and had gone in to see what the Noblesville press had to say about you, and I hurried around and told everybody you were here. What'll I do?" Indianapolis News.

Walking to Learn the World.

President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia has lately given another example of his practical idealism and wise foresight. He is furnishing the funds for a walking tour of the world this summer by students of Prague university. In the group are two Czechs, a Serb, a Bulgarian and a Russian. After walking through Yugoslavia and Bulgaria the students will go to Constantinople and then to China and Japan. Thence passage will be taken to San Francisco and the leading cities of the United States will be visited on foot. Prague university will publish a report of the expedition. President Masaryk knows the folly of national isolation and the value of learning something about other nations besides his own.—Christian Science Monitor.

Toronto's Vacation Schools.

Utilizing schoolhouses, churches and public buildings, Toronto is maintaining this summer daily vacation schools in the congested districts of the city. More than 3,000 children are in attendance, says the Christian Science Monitor. While the primary object is to provide a place of refuge from the hot streets, the school has also a distinct educational value. The morning session is devoted to "playwork" and includes basketry, sewing and radio instruction, story-telling, kindergarten activities and occasional moving picture exhibitions. In the afternoon come games, hikes and organized sports.

Unearth Ancient Roman Barge.

Important archeological discoveries have been made at Castello di Porto near Rome. The hull of an enormous Roman barge has been excavated near a small lake. It is presumably a relic of a mercantile fleet which was used to ship wheat from Sicily to Rome before Castello di Porto shipped by the Tiber. The hull is like a similar relic of Nero's fleet at lovely Lake Nemi. Excavations are proceeding and other discoveries are expected.

Newsboy, Seventy One, Follows Races.

David Stevens, a seventy-one year-old newsboy of Dublin has attended every running of the Epsom Derby for 70 years. The week of the race is his only holiday. At all other times he is to be found on the street corner in the Irish capital selling papers.

Old Henry's Wooing

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"Hello, Hank! Saving up to get married?"

Old Henry Dobson, who had been one of the bookkeepers of the Friend company for nearly a score of years, looked up sheepishly and thrust away the bills he was counting.

"Better hurry up; not much time to lose, Hank!"

Henry Dobson must have been fifty, and why he had been so long with the company and still retained a subordinate position was not difficult to see. Honest, plodding, industrious, he had not the qualities that make for success. An elderly-looking man, unobtrusive, he went his way, the butt of mild witticisms on the part of the younger men.

No one knew anything about old Henry, nor where he lived, and nobody cared.

The same applied equally to Miss Rowell, of the correspondence department. Miss Rowell had been there nine years, and looked just a plain, pale, rather faded old maid.

"Say, Miss Rowell, Hank Dobson reckons he's going to get married!"

Sadie, the telephone girl, said this, and waited for the quick blush to appear on Miss Rowell's face.

"Is he, really? Oh, isn't that nice?"

"Say," said Sadie to her friend, Agnes Strutt, "wouldn't it be a joke to make Amy Rowell think Hank Dobson's in love with her?"

"And to make him think she's in love with him?"

"How'll we do it?"

"Watch me!" said Sadie cryptically.

On the following morning Miss Rowell found a neat little bunch of violets on her desk, with a scrap of postcard attached, bearing in writing the words, "With H. D.'s compliments."

Her attention appeared plain. The girls, watching her, and many quiet giggles as they saw her surreptitiously and to sniff the fragrance of the flowers.

"Say, Hank, that's a fine bunch of flowers you sent Miss Rowell."

"I didn't send her any flowers. What'd I want to send her flowers for?" protested Henry Dobson.

"Well, don't you let on you didn't. She's coming to thank you."

Little Miss Rowell stopped at Henry Dobson's desk. "Thank you so much for your beautiful flowers, Mr. Dobson," she said in a quiet voice.

A few days later Henry Dobson found a pair of socks on his desk, bearing a card, "With kind remembrances from A. R." Examination disclosed the fact that the heels were gone.

"Say, Miss Rowell, Mr. Dobson's had such a lovely pair of socks from some one," said Sadie.

Little Miss Rowell raised her head indignantly. "Who sent them?" she asked.

"Oh, Miss Rowell! Oh, Miss Rowell!" they teased her.

It was funny to see how nervously Miss Rowell avoided Henry Dobson's desk for several days thereafter.

The cream of the joke came a few days later. Miss Rowell opened a little cardboard box. Inside was a ten-year-old valentine, procured from some old dealer who had had it rotting on his shelf since the days when valentines remained in fashion. The lace paper edge was torn and maddened. The picture represented an elderly spinster with a long, red nose and underneath was printed:

I think you're out for marriage. As all the world can see, I hope you'll find a man to your mind. As long as it isn't me.

The scander had scratched out the last word and substituted "H. D."

Miss Rowell's right hand jerked convulsively. The valentine, torn in half, dropped into the wastebasket.

Twelve struck. Hank Dobson came slowly into the correspondence department as the girls were getting on their hats. Miss Rowell rose up, smiling.

"Oh, Sadie, you know I'm not coming back on Monday?" she asked.

"Not coming back, Miss Rowell? There was genuine regret. Then, impulsively: "Oh, Miss Rowell, if it's because we've bothered you so much, won't you overlook it? I—I'm really ashamed."

"My dear, you haven't bothered me at all," Miss Rowell smiled. "But my husband and I are starting a little poultry farm—the dream of our lives."

"Oh, Miss Rowell! I mean—why, Miss Rowell, you and Mr. Dobson have got married!"

"Ten years ago, my dear," smiled Amy Rowell.

The First Wallpaper in America.

Wall papers did not begin to come into this country until the second quarter of the Eighteenth century. Even then they were specially ordered by the individual householders from their dealers in London and Paris, rather than carried from the general retail trade. Thomas Hancock, for instance, ordered in 1737, a specially made paper from his stationer, Thomas Rowe of London, and in his letter giving the order speaks of another paper similarly imported by a friend of his, three or four years earlier. By 1745 however wall paper was in retail stock here, Charles Hargrave of Philadelphia advertising it in that year. But certainly it was not in general use until 1750. By that time it had become enormously popular and a host of merchants in all the larger towns were advertising new importations with the arrival of every ship—Charles Ackema in Arts and Decorations.

NARROW ESCAPE

FROM LIGHTNING

A house at Hyde City belonging to W. J. Duffon and occupied by Mrs. Lillian Hancy, was badly damaged by lightning during the storm Friday evening.

Mrs. Hancy, who had just retired, was thrown from her bed clear across the room and severely shocked. The bolt having torn the lath and plaster from the wall twisting the rods of the bed almost double, passed thru the bed and down thru the floor tearing the partition from between the two rooms down stairs into the cellar, after tearing a hole clear thru the piano and doing considerable damage to other furniture.

A VALUABLE JOKE

"Who is the important looking person?"
"He's the author of an original joke?"
"Just one?"

"One made him famous. It formed the basis of a vaudeville sketch, a hit in a comedy and a motion picture scenario. Last month it figured as a humorous story of three thousand words in a popular magazine."

"Folks all well this morning, Johnny?"
"Yes, I am."

"Oh, yes, they're still at it. I thought you meant was any of us sick?"

A Recessional

A vain clown in a red and gold man's suit had entered the room.
"I liked the passage at the end very much," said the old man.

"Which was that?" asked the clergyman.
"The one from the pulpit to the vestry," said the old man—I don't fit in."

THEY WENT OVER THE HILL TO THE POOR HOUSE

The Rockville Quilt team with a small band of supporters, went over the hill to the first ball play ground yesterday afternoon and were beaten two games out of three. The first game was a pick up game and it was started and ended in a game where the visitors had to leave. A cordial invitation for a return game of course extended but not very enthusiastically received. The road looks longer the other way and the church is too precious to be used again.

B. R. & P. EMPLOYEES BADLY HURT IN FALL ON BRIDGE

Herbert Nul, aged about 35, of Du Bois, is a patient in the Clearfield hospital suffering from a possible broken back which he received in an accident which befell him about 10 o'clock this morning.

Nul was working with a crew of men at the railroad bridge over the creek near Curwensville where some repairs are being made about the piers. He was engaged in attempting to adjust one of the rails on the bridge using a handspike. He had his feet braced against the opposite rail. The handspike suddenly broke under the strain and Nul was thrown heavily to the floor of the bridge landing on his back across one of the rails.

His fellow workmen rushed to his aid and finding Nul unconscious from his injuries carried him off the bridge where he was placed on an improvised stretcher on a hand truck and brought by four of his fellow workmen to the Clearfield hospital where Dr. Stewart took charge of him.

Nul is very badly hurt it being feared that his back is broken. But the extent of his injuries cannot be determined until an X-ray picture of the injured back is taken this afternoon.

FROM POORHOUSE TO GREAT WEALTH IS LUCK OF THIS MAN

Titusville, Pa., Aug. 24.—(U. P.)—From poorhouse to comfortable in come within the space of a year, is the experience of John Wildes, 60, of this city. Wildes, a cripple, and without means of support, was assigned to the poorhouse of Warren County about a year ago. He was a member of a family poor but industrious and after a serious injury he was no longer able to work.

Years ago his family inherited a small parcel of timberland along the Allegheny River. The property was considered practically worthless. Then came the recent oil boom here and the opening of the Carnahan-Chinger field, which caused a sensation in the oil industry. The Wildes property is in the heart of the field and is known as "Wildes Acre."

A well was brought in on the Wildes' property recently that started off with a production of 300 barrels a day. The royalty on this amounts to more than $300 a day. As a result Wildes left the poorhouse and with other members of his family is living in comfort.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

After eight years of married life, MARK SABRE discovered that he had cut himself off from human sympathy and appreciation. His prosaic and snobbish wife, MABEL, fails to understand his poetic temperament. At the firm of Fortune, East and Sabre, school and church outposts, Sabre is surrounded by jealousy and a partnership, once promised to him, is promised to an associate, TWYNING. Suddenly one who understands him returns to his life. This is Nona.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Sabre remained standing at his desk. He had a tiny ball of paper in his hand and he rolled it round between his finger and thumb, round and round and round and round. In his mind was a recollection. "You have struck your tents and are upon the march."

He thought, "This has been coming a long time. . . . It's my way of looking at things has done this. I'm getting so I've got nowhere to turn. It's no good pretending I don't feel this. I feel it most frightfully. . . . It was rottenly done. I leaped my back. Plotted against me, or they wouldn't have sprung it on me like that. This frightful feeling of being alone in the place. More empty at home. . . . And now, there's this. . . . You have struck your tents and are upon the march' . . . Yes. Yes."

He suddenly recollected Nona's letter. He took it from his pocket and opened it, and the second event was discharged upon him.

She wrote from their town house: "Mark, take me away—Nona."

His emotions leapt to her with most terrible violence. He felt his heart leap against his breast as though, engine of his tumult, it would burst its bonds and to her. He struck his hand upon the desk. He said aloud, "Yes! Yes!" He remembered his words, "If you ever feel you can't bear it, tell me—Tell me."

He began to write plans to her. He would come to London tomorrow. . . . She should come to the station if she could; if not, he would be at the Great Western Hotel. She would telephone to him there and they could arrange to meet and discuss what they should do. . . . He would like to go away with her directly they met; there were certain things to see. He wrote, "But I can only take you."

His pen stopped. Familiar words! He repeated them to himself, and their conclusion and their circumstance appeared and stood, as with a sword, across the passage of his thoughts. "But I can only lead you downwards. I cannot lead you upwards."

As with a sword— He sat back in his chair and gazed upon this armed intruder to give it battle.

III The morning passed and the afternoon while still he sat, no more moving than to sink lower in his seat as the battle joined and as he most dreadfully suffered in its most dreadful crisis. Towards five o'clock he put out his hand without moving his position and drew towards him the letter he had begun. The action was as that of one utterly undone. He very slowly tore it across, and then across again, and so into tiniest fragments till his fingers could no more fasten upon them. He dropped his arm away and opened his hand, and the white pieces fluttered in a little cloud to the floor.

Presently he drew himself up to the table and began to write, writing very slowly because his hand trembled so. In half an hour he blotted the few lines on the last sheet.

So, simply what I want to do is to let you see—if we take it—be mine, not yours. We shall for get absolutely that you ever wrote. It is as though it had never been written. On Tuesday I will write and ask you, 'Shall I come up to you?' So if you say 'Yes' the action will have been entirely mine. It will start there. This hasn't happened. And during these days in between, just think like anything over what I've said. Honor can't have any degree, Nona, any more than truth can have any degree, whatever else the world can quibble to its own partition. These truths are just truth and honor is just honor. And a marriage vow is a pledge of burial away once forever too squeamish principles which for years, begging about his conduct on this side and on that, had profited nothing those on whose behalf they had been erected and on his own life had desolated into barrenness.

He was little disposed to divert attention to the international disturbance which now were rumbling across the newspapers in portentous and enormous headlines. Ireland was pressed away. It was all Europe now—throne, chancelleries, councils, armies.

The cauldron whose seething and bubbling had entertained some, fidgeted some nothing at all concerned, suddenly boiled over, and poured in boiling fat upon the flames, and pointed in flames upon the hearth of every man's concerns.

On Friday the Stock Exchange closed. On Saturday Germany declared war on Russia. In Sunday's papers Sabre read of the panic run on the banks, people lighting to convert their notes into gold. One London bank had suspended payment. Many had shut out failure only by minutes when midday permitted them to close their doors. People were besieging the provision shops to lay in stores of food.

And poured in flames upon the hearth of every man's concerns. . . . All his concerns, the crisis with Nona, with his honor and his love, that awaited determination, were disputed their place in his mind by the incredible and enormous events that each new hour discharged upon the world.

The news of Tuesday morning caused him at six o'clock in the evening to have been standing two hours in the great throng that filled Market Square gazing towards the office of the County Times. Our mobilization, our resolve to stand by France if the German fleet came into the Channel, lastly, most awfully pregnant of all, our obligations to Belgium—that had been the morning's news. That afternoon the prime minister was to make a statement.

A great murmur swelled up from the waiting crowd, a great movement pressed it forward towards the County Times offices. On the first-floor balcony men appeared dragging a great board faced with paper, on the paper enormous lettering. The board was pulled out sideways. The man last through the window took a step forward and swung the letters into view.

PREMIER'S STATEMENT

ULTIMATUM TO GERMANY EXPIRES MIDNIGHT

Sabre said aloud, "My God! War!"

As a retreating wave harshly withdrawing upon the reluctant participants, there sounded from the crowd an enormous intonation of breath. An instant stupor, a stupor of death, the whole paused for return. Down! A shattering roar, tremendous, wordless. The figure of Pike, the editor, appeared upon the balcony, in his shirt sleeves, his long hair wild about his face, in his hands that which caught the roar as it were by the throat, stopped it and broke it into anew on a burst of exultant clamor. A Union Jack. He shook it wildly with both hands above his head. The roar broke into a tremendous chant, "God Save the King!"

CHAPTER III

I

HE approached Penny Green and realized for the first time the hard peace at which he had been riding. And realized also the emotions which subconsciously had been driving him along. All the way he had been saying "War!" What he wanted, most terribly, was to say it aloud to someone. He wanted to say it to Mabel. He had a sudden great desire to see Mabel and tell her about it and talk to her about it. He felt a curiously protective feeling to ward her. He ran into the house and into the morning room. Mabel was not there. It was almost dim. She would be in her room. He ran upstairs. She was standing before her dressing table and turned to him in surprise.

"Whatever—"

"I say, it's war!"

AUSTRIA DECLARIS WAR ON SERBIA

He shook his head at the paper the boy held out to him and rode away. What had that kind of thing to do with him?

IV

Unutterable darkness! He lived within it during the days that followed while he awaited the day appointed to write to Nona again. Whatever she said when he asked, whichever way she answered him, he would be brought relief from his intolerable stress. If she maintained honor above love, his weakness, he knew, would be welded into strength, as the presence of another brings enormous support to timidity; if she declared for love—his mind surged within him at the imagination of to be duplicated this winter, Charles H. Searles, Editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, forecast today.

Searles, who has made a careful survey of the fuel situation, believes the railroads of the country will not be able to haul all the coal that is mined and required to meet the business and domestic needs. While the Federal Government now is rationing fuel it will have to go much further to save the people from suffering and business from serious embarrassment this winter, Searles said. If the Government does not revive the fuel administration which, operated during the war and in the winter of 1920 then the states and cities will have to take the necessary step, he said.

Fuel Conference Today.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—The most important fuel conference since the Pennsylvania Fuel Commission was organized was to assemble here today at 2 o'clock. Representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission will meet with members of the six regional committees to thresh out the whole question of bituminous coal production, distribution and regulation in the State.

Searles Predicts Great Fuel Shortage

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—Lightless night, congested streets and service, a shortage of power, a shortage of industry and commerce were threatened during the week and it was coal conservation predicted.

Start Work at Once

The mine leaders, upon signing the agreement, agreed to immediately instruct their local presidents to order their members to resume work at once, and as many of the mines have been preparing for the settlement for some time, it is said last night that a number of operations will see resumption.

All Are Relieved

Operators and mine leaders alike seemed relieved that the strike is over and came out of the final joint conference with smiles on their faces.

The operators are especially well pleased over the act that the new agreement is distinct in character, having maintained all along that conditions prevalent in the central competitive field are not the conditions here and thus refusing during past five months to abide by proposal coming from conferences held in that field. The consummation of a distinct victory, coming as it does after bitter opposition from National President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers.

MAIN & COMPANY GIVE FINAL REPORT ON STATE AUDIT

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—Recommendations for modernizing the book-keeping system of the State Treasury featured the final report of Main & Company, certified public accountants, employed by Auditor General Samuel S. Lewis to examine the accounts of the State Treasury. The report made public today was forwarded to Governor Sprout and the candidates for Governor, Gifford Pinchot and John A. MacSparan.

Besides summarizing the results of the seven previous sections of their report the Auditors urged a State budget system as the one means of avoiding in the future the irregularities in handling State funds which they said they had discovered during their examination.

In a statement issued at the same time Auditor General Lewis said that the budget recommendations were a matter for the consideration either of the State Treasurer or the commission for the reorganization of State government authorized by the Legislature and appointed by Governor Sprout. A copy of the report was forwarded to Clyde L. King, Chairman of the Citizens Committee appointed by Gifford Pinchot.

Guy R. Molony, Superintendent of New Orleans' "Finest," Will Call Legionnaires to Aid.

Confronted with the task of handling a crowd of 150,000 visitors to the American Legion convention in New Orleans, Oe. 18 to 21, Police Superintendent Guy R. Molony will call his brother Legionnaires into action.

Superintendent Molony, an active Legion member, has announced that 1,000 uniformed Legionnaires will assist his police force in regulating the large crowds thronging the convention parade route and will serve as provost guards in the business district.

During a recent trip to Kansas City Superintendent Molony investigated conditions prevailing in that city during last year's American Legion convention. He discovered that city and police officials had no criticism to make concerning the way in which the 150,000 visiting ex-servicemen conducted themselves, and stated that Kansas City officials would welcome the opportunity to have the organization again choose Kansas City as their convention city.

BUNKS FOR THE LEGION MEN

V. A. W. Steger, Chairman of National Convention Housing Committee, Has Completed Plans.

Every man to his own taste in "bunks," says V. A. W. Steger, chairman of the housing committee of the American Legion national convention, to be held in New Orleans next October.

Convention visitors will be housed in a variety of ways.

While the bulk of the crowd will choose the hotels and rooms in New Orleans homes, there will be an opportunity for a substantial percentage to remain on the Pullman cars and the steamboats and ocean liners which take them to the convention city.

Mr. Steger has obtained a hotel rate of $1.50 a day without bath and $2.50 a day with bath. More than 14,000 visitors can be housed in the Pullman cars, which will be provided with all conveniences of a modern hotel. A special arrangement with railroads will enable the convention guest to live on his Pullman car for about $2 a day, and a uniformly low rate will also prevail in rooms in New Orleans homes.

Those doughboys who prefer to return to the barracks life for five days may be quartered in New Orleans' $15,000,000 army supply base and in various halls and lodge rooms.

Reservations for rooms, Mr. Steger has announced, must be made through the visitor's American Legion state adjutant, who will confirm them with the convention housing committee.

HAVE ARMY ON SHORT NOTICE

Government Could Provide Ample Military Protection in Any Emergency, Pershing Says.

An army large enough to guard every important bridge and railway terminal, all important industries and coal mines, as well as governmental buildings, could be placed in the field on short notice by the United States government, Gen. John J. Pershing declared in a statement recently issued, telling what could be done if this country were invaded.

Brighten regular war strength infantry divisions, of reserves, composed of 600,000 men, an expanded National Guard with 500,000 men and regular army units, augmented by volunteers to approximately 175,000 men, could be made quickly available, the general said.

"The national defense act of 1920," Pershing's statement declared, "prescribed that the organized peace establishment, including the regular army, the National Guard and the organized reserves, shall include all of those divisions and other military organizations necessary to form the basis of a complete and immediate mobilization for the national defense in the event of a national emergency declared by congress."

"The evident intent," the statement continues, "is that the system of national defense shall be definitely organized, that the military units required for service in any emergency shall be constituted in time of peace, and that each of them shall be prepared to undertake its initial mission in time to meet the requirements of the situation."

How to Make and Use It

By A. HYATT VERRILL

XXV. USEFUL THINGS TO REMEMBER

Adding anything to the efficiency of a set.

That a variable grid-leak can be made with pencil marks on paper and may be altered by erasing or adding lines.

That some tubes are best for detectors, others for amplification and others for transmitting or as oscillators.

That it is often cheaper to buy ready-made accessories than to make them.

That all joints in wires (except in binding-posts) should be soldered.

That the ground connection should be soldered to a water, gas or similar pipe or to a large copper plate buried in the ground.

That the steel girder or frame of a building makes a good ground.

That sending or transmitting sets must have a license to comply with the law.

That the fire departments have special regulations regarding the installation of aials.

That an aerial cannot be placed across a street without permission.

That aials do not attract lightning and if provided with a gap or lightning switch are perfectly safe.

That the best in the way of materials is always cheapest in the end.

That when using a sending set the low voltage should be turned on first or the tube may be ruined.

That in a sending set the battery should always be turned off when the phone circuit when not in use.

That a sending set is always better with a counterpoise than with a ground.

That it does not pay to try to make certain instruments.

That while wireless telephones are so easily adjusted and simple a child may use them, they are also very delicate affairs and are easily put out of adjustment or ruined by carelessness.

That you must not expect too much for your money in ready-made or home-made sets.

That a set may act very differently on different days or under different conditions.

That you should not condemn your instruments until you are sure the fault is not in yourself.

That loose connections, poor insulation, poor ground, poor joints in wires, worn insulation, wires crossing and many other small matters may put a set completely out of business.

That you can seldom improve upon a ready-made set by adding anything to it, but can do better by building a new set.

That every accessory or piece of apparatus is made for a specific purpose and that you should consult the manufacturer or dealer as to the best for your purpose before purchasing.

That the most expensive sets are not always the best as oftentimes flash, cabinets and elaborate fittings add to cost without increasing efficiency.

That while a receiving set may be made for use inside a safety match box such things are merely toys and are not for household use.

That when a dealer advertises that a cheap set can receive signals from a certain distance, be sure to find out if he means code signals from radio telegraphic stations or sounds of voices, music, etc. No one can guarantee how far a set will receive as too many outside factors influence this.

That like everything else each and every maker claims his sets are the best. Investigate several before buying.

That anyone with the least mechanical ability can build wireless telephone sets if they purchase the parts which require special knowledge, skill or devices for making.

That the prices of most sets do not include batteries, tubes or phones.

That a storage battery must be recharged as soon as it becomes weak or your set will not work.

That the vacuum-tube is one of the most delicate devices ever invented and should be treated accordingly.

That no license is required for receiving sets and the air is free to all who want to listen-in.

That all broadcasting stations publish their daily programs.

That the most interferences are the nearby sending stations. So don't add to others' troubles by sending unless you have good reasons or are sincere in your experiments.

That an ordinary telephone horn attached to a head telephone receiver will increase the sounds somewhat and will act as a loud speaker.

That a variable-condenser helps fine tuning.

That the filament battery of a vacuum tube set may be a dry battery, but that it is more expensive in the end than a storage battery.

That the Ultra Audion circuit has the plate circuit fed back to the honey-comb coil and amounts to a regenerative set.

That the best type of vacuum-bulb receiving set is the regenerative with amplifiers.

That each step of amplification requires another tube.

That if there are too many turns on the inductance they may be taken off to secure tuning.

That the distance you can receive depends upon various climatic and other conditions.

That the filament lighting does not always mean the set is operating properly.

That if filament rheostat is turned on suddenly the filament may be paralyzed and must be left to recuperate before it will glow.

That burning the filament too brightly wastes the filament and shortens the life of the tube without

HOUSE LOSES NO TIME PASSING THE HARDING COAL BILL

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—The administration bill for creation of a federal commission to obtain all facts possible relating to the coal industry and on which the miners and operators were denied representation was passed by the House, 219 to 55.

The House refused to accept as a substitute for the administration coal investigating coal committee the Bland measure, which would have given miners and operators representation.

After long debate the motion to substitute the Bland bill was rejected, 126 to 75. The House also voted down a proposal to cut the size of the commission from nine to five members.

Confers With Harding

Attorney General Daugherty conferred with President Harding regarding the coal situation today and it was indicated afterward that a state-

ent was being prepared at the White House giving what steps were taken by the administration to protect the interest of the public.

Alternative plans for the maintenance of fair prices for coal and for its equitable distribution during the past strike periods were presented to President Harding today by Secretary Hoover.

One plan as presented for the President's approval was understood to provide for the creation of a Federal fuel distribution agency along the lines of the voluntary machinery operating under Federal Fuel Distributor Spencer. It also would authorize the Interstate Commerce Commission to assume great policies in the assuming of freight cars. The other proposal was supposed to provide for a coal purchasing corporation which would stabilize fuel prices by the fixation of a fair price for coal bought and sold by the Government.

ADDRESS LETTER TO EDITORS OF ALL
REPUBLICAN PAPERS TELLING THEM
WHAT HIS PLATFORM IS GOING TO BE

Renews His Pledges As To The State Finances,
Reorganization Of State Government, Banish-
ment Of Saloon And Cleaning Up Capital Hill

OPENS CAMPAIGN AT CENTRE HALL

Mr. G. A. Stewart,
Editor, The Progress,
Clearfield, Pa.

Dear Mr. Stewart:

You are the editor of a Republican newspaper, and I am the Republican candidate for Governor. I am anxious, therefore, that you keep me fully posted on my part in the coming campaign, and that is why I am taking the liberty of sending you this letter.

In accordance with an old Republican custom, I am going to speak at a political field day at Dorney's Park near Allentown on August 26th, but the formal opening of my campaign will not take place until the Grange Encampment at Centre Hall on September 7. From that time on I expect to be on the job until election.

Any plan of campaign must, of course, be subject to chance. As at present determined, the general plan is to cover as large a part of the State and as many counties as may be possible in the time available, laying emphasis, mainly, not on the great centers of population like Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, but on the small towns and rural communities, and upon those districts where Republican success may be in doubt.

Means What He Says.

One thing the people want to know about a candidate is whether he means what he says. I do, and my campaign this fall will be based squarely upon the pledges I made during the primary campaign. I promised, if elected, to let in the light and clean up the mess at Harrisburg, and I will.

On the stump I expect to give special attention to the financial reconstruction of the State, the reorganization of the State Government, and the elimination of the saloon, because these will be principal policies of the incoming administration.

The unofficial Committee on the Finances of Pennsylvania, which I appointed immediately after the primary, is vigorously at work, with the assistance of the best experts available in Pennsylvania and elsewhere in America, to secure a thorough knowledge of the essential facts about the present condition of the State's finances, and about the expending policies of the several Departments, and in assembling the material for a State budget. The latter I expect to submit to the Legislature early in the coming session. As you know, I am pledged to approve no appropriations which do not fall completely within the estimated revenues of the State.

The Budget System.

The reconstruction of the State Government will be a long, difficult, and complicated task. Preliminary examination of the plans of the Reorganization Commission appointed by Governor Sproul leads me to conclude that they cannot be accepted as they stand, but must be modified in important particulars. Such modifishould be reported in full for its consideration.

The First Need.

The reorganization of the Government is absolutely essential before real economy can be secured, and before the extremely pressing question of centralization and home rule can be wisely settled. I am a strong believer in local self-government for cities, boroughs, townships and school districts, and as little dictation from Harrisburg as possible. Economy and home rule are of genuine importance. Hence this rather lengthy discussion.

In the matter of prohibition, practically all good citizens are agreed that the bootleggers must be driven out of business and the saloon must be eliminated. No argument is required on that.

Many other subjects, of course, will come up both for discussion in the campaign and for action by the new administration, but financial reconstruction, reorganization of the Government, and enforcement of law stand out from all the rest.

I am sure that I may count upon your help, not only during the campaign, but afterwards, in carrying these policies vigorously and effectively to completion. While I propose to make such a campaign as I would make if the election were greatly in doubt, I am not unduly anxious as to the outcome. What I do feel most strongly about is the work that must be done after election to put Pennsylvania on a sound financial basis, to make the State Government an effective and economical machine for the service of the people, and to enforce the law.

In these matters and in the others which will necessarily arise I recognize that success will be impossible without the support of the Republican press, and I earnestly hope I may have your full sympathy and cooperation in the difficult task ahead. In particular, I hope I may have the benefit of any suggestions or advice

Aged Woman Is Given Brutal Treatment By Daughter And Son

Mahanoy City, Pa., Aug. 24. (U. P.)—Huddled in the corner of a dark damp, dirty cellar, where she had been kept prisoner for two years an 85 year old woman was recently rescued by the police.

For no other reason apparently than that she was in the way the aged woman is alleged to have been forced in her cellar dungeon by her daughter and son-in-law.

With only rats and mice as her companions and starved almost to a living skeleton, the white haired mother lived from scraps of food that her children shoved into the cellar through a coal hole.

When the old woman was discovered by the police she resisted the officers, not realizing that she was to be taken from the underground prison to cozy and comfortable quarters.

Authorities at once started to investigate the case. The daughter and son-in-law were questioned severely but only shrugged their shoulders in Russian fashion and no definite information could be obtained from them.

The man and woman were placed under surveillance pending further investigation of the case, while the aged mother was taken to a more comfortable home and given medical attention.

GOVERNMENT MAKES BIG ROUNDUP OF "REDS" AND COMMUNISTS WHO MET IN SECRET CONCLAVE OUTSIDE OF CHICAGO

Bridgeman, Mich., Aug. 24.—Three prominent women radicals including Mrs. Rose C. Stokes and Ella Reeve Boor, accompanied William A. Foster, radical agitator, Boris Reinstein and Arnold J. Losovsky on their flight from here yesterday, police said.

The flight was made in a small plane, which was forced to land today. The flight was made to avoid capture by the government. Evidence to convict hundreds of Communists through out the United States is in the hands of authorities, it was said.

Bridgeman, Mich., Aug. 23.—The Government struck in its campaign against what Federal investigators declare is an international plot against peaceful functioning of American industry.

Directed from Washington by William J. Burns, chief of the United States secret service, four Federal inspectors, leading 20 deputy sheriffs, after lying in the hills near here for three days, swooped down on the international convention of the Communist party, held in a remote resort, and captured 15 leaders.

Sixty-one delegates, including William Z. Foster, head of the "one big union" movement, and M. Reinstein and P. Lokowsky, said to be personal representatives of Nicholas Lenin, escaped before the raid after a thrilling chase afoot and in taxi-cabs over almost impassable roads and tonight are being hunted by a swarm of secret service men, Michigan state trooper and the police of Michigan, Indiana and Illinois.

Reds and "Pinks" Taken
The arrested leaders, who include many of the best known names in radical and "Pink" circles in the country, were lodged in the Berrien county jail and truckloads of radical literature and correspondence which, according to the inspectors, indicates that the convention was working under direct leadership of Soviet Russia, was taken.

The raid, regarded as the most important coup of the Government against radicalism in years, was the culmination of months of patient waiting by the secret service men.

The Government knew of the proposed convention through its secret service. Operatives have been shadowing the Communist leaders for months, it is learned.

Last Saturday the Communist leaders began to gather in Chicago from all parts of the country and each arrival with a Government operative as his shadow.

Reds Take Alarm, Flee
Then it was learned that the preliminary convention was to be held in the Carl Wolfskeel resort, hidden away in the woods near here.

Led by Sheriff George Bridgeman of Berrien county, 20 deputies laid in wait on the hills surrounding the wood-hidden resort from Saturday night until today. The Communists arrived, singly and in pairs until, last night there were 76 of them at the resort.

Sheriff Bridgeman communicated with the Federal inspectors who came from Chicago. Before they could arrive, however, outposts of the radicals according to deputies, got wind of the raid and the majority of the delegates escaped, plunging into the woods. Foster, Reinstein and Lokowsky are believed to have secured an automobile to Benton Harbor.

Man Hunt Is Started
When W. J. Burns, directing the raid by telephone from Washington learned of the escape of part of the delegates he telephoned Colonel Roy C. Vandercok, commissioner of safety at Lansing, to send state troopers here. They arrived tonight and at once started a man-hunt through the dense woods and in nearby towns. Police at Chicago were notified to watch all radical rendezvous there and every Federal agent in three states was instructed to be on the lookout.

The meeting here was to have been preliminary to a convention of the Trades Educational League, headed by William Z. Foster, and the National Workers' party, to have been held secretly in Chicago on Aug. 27-28.

Had Hand in Rail Trouble

"We have not had time to study all of the correspondence," said Jacob Spolanski, Federal operative, "but we have connected this aggregation with railroad strike troubles and to some extent with the wreck at Gary, Ind., where spikes were removed from the ties."

The alleged representatives of Lenin were to have offered financial assistance in furthering the Communist movement in America, according to another official.

Those in jail here are: C. E. Ruppberg, National executive secretary of the Workers' Party of America; Cleveland; William F. Dunne, labor editor of "The Workers," Communist paper; W. Reynolds, Detroit; Max Larnes, Seattle; Wash; Cyril Lauchkin, Detroit; Francis Ashworth, Camden, N. J.; Alex. Vail, Philadelphia; Charles Krumbine, New York; T. R. Sullivan, St. Louis, said to be chairman of the executive council of the Workers' Party of America; John Mihelic, Kansas City; E. McMillin, St. Louis; Thomas O'Flaherty, New York; Calob Morrison, Chicago; C. Nordling Portland, Ore., and Charles Erickson, Chicago.

PHILIPSBURG GIRL HIKES 400 MILES IN KHAKI KNICKERS

Miss Clara Jackson, of North Philipsburg, has returned from a visit of four weeks to her aunt, Mrs. Van C. Jackson, of S. J. Much of the time was spent in hiking.

A party, consisting of Miss Jackson and Mrs. Keator, noted above, and Miss Billie Keator, of Scranton, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Keator, and their guest, Miss Ethel Bushy, of Mobile, Alabama, hiked to Philadelphia, Berlin, N. J., and Atlantic City, N. J. They visited Rev. J. E. Stanton, at Berlin, and Mrs. John Kline, at Kintnersville. Two days were spent in Philadelphia.

The hikers wore khaki knickers and middies, soft felt hats and red ties. The nights were spent at farm houses or hotels along the way. A number of photographs of places of interest were made by members of the party.

About 400 miles were covered, and Miss Jackson and the others in the party regard it as a great experience.

Enthusiasm, Enthusiasm is always connected with the senses whatever be the object that excites it. The true strength of virtue is serenity of mind combined with a deliberate and steadfast determination to execute her laws. That is the healthful condition of the moral life; on the other hand, enthusiasm even when excited to representations of goodness, is a brilliant but feverish glow which leaves only exhaustion and languor behind.—Kant.

Measure of Culture. Culture is not measured by the pretentious of the field which is covered by our knowledge, but by the nicety with which we can perceive relations in that field, whether great or small.—R. F. Stevenson.

Offshoot, as it Were. "If you really are connected with the Von Blewbludds, why haven't you a family tree?" "Well—ahem—to tell the truth, our family is only a branch."—Puck.

Daily Thought. We all of us exercise unconscious ministries. When we never dream we are affecting anybody we are touching and turning others all the time.—G. H. Morrison, D. D.

Might Have Known That Before. "When a man goes around looking for advice," said Uncle Eben, "about all he finds for certain is that opinions are bound to differ."

Their Makeup Must Differ. One drop of petrol will kill a wasp instantly, but if applied to a bee or a fly it will be quite ineffective.

STRIKING SHOPMEN
AT HOLLIDAYSBURG
RETURN TO WORK

The Altoona Mirror says:
Fifty striking employees of the Pennsylvania railroad at Hollidaysburg beat the Railway Labor board and the heads of the shop crafts to it in the matter of settling their differences. These men, tired of the idleness which they voluntarily subjected themselves to, have voluntarily returned to work. Thirty of them reported for duty yesterday morning. The men returned, not as former employees off on furlough, or leave of absence from any cause, but as new men.

This is the information gleaned from those in charge of the works department at Hollidaysburg. None have returned to the engine house, although the foreman there this morning informed a representative of the Altoona Mirror that there are openings there. The Hollidaysburg shops suffered more from the strike than any in this part of the State. More than three hundred left their jobs, crippling the work badly.

However, the shops did not close down. Necessary work was carried on by the loyal workers and some new men were added to the rolls. It was reported on a number of occasions that strikers had returned and made requests for their old places, but they were chary about accepting positions unless their seniority rights were restored. However, it is now reported they have returned and taken up their labors as new men.

The reports that the Hollidaysburg shops might be dismantled because of the action of so many of the men in striking seems to be without foundation in fact. Some of the machinery was moved, but for what reason, no one about the works there seems to know. The large yards at Hollidaysburg make it expedient to have repair shops there and while further extensions may be held in abeyance as a result of the strike, it is improbable they will ever be moved away and the chances for their extension look good.

Picketing about the Hollidaysburg shops ceased some time ago and a corps of extra railroad patrolmen which had been placed as a guard about the shops have largely been laid off or transferred to other places, so that while the shops are operating with somewhat depleted force yet, it is expected that within a short time, normal conditions will exist there.

It may be also that some later agreement between the men and the company will restore, at least in part, the seniority rights of those who struck, repented and have returned to work.

Noticeable Resemblance.
"Isn't that a Bouguereau?" asked Mrs. Oldcast's as they stopped for a moment to look at the new pictures.
"Oh, my no," replied her hostess; "it's a lion. But I told Josiah when he brought it home that it looked a good deal more like one of them things you mention."

WAS A BROKEN-
DOWN WOMAN

Then I Began Taking Lydia E.
Pinkham's Medicines

Donaldsonville, La.—"I write with pleasure to praise your medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—which has done so much to restore my health. I was a broken-down woman until my husband brought me a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and one of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. I had been having pains every month and at intervals between, was weak and seemed to be smothering at times, but in a week I felt like another woman. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. It did me a lot of good too. I cannot praise your medicines too much and will be more than glad to recommend them to any woman who is suffering from female troubles. You may print my testimonial, as it is true."—Mrs. T. A. LANDRY, 612 Miss. St., Donaldsonville, La.

Note Mrs. Landry's words—"as it is true." Every letter recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is genuine. It is a statement telling the merits of these medicines just as the women in your own neighborhood tell each other about them. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has sold on merit.

DISTRICT NO. FIVE MAY COME TO AGREE IN THE NEAR FUTURE

A coming break in the deadlock between the Pittsburgh Coal Producers' Association and District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, was forecasted yesterday by action of the former organization in authorizing its scale committee, which is directed to meet today, to re-establish the wages paid in the mines when the strike started, April 1, the wage scale on which the Cleveland settlement was negotiated.

The check-off question and the repeatedly announced refusal of the major producers' association of the Pittsburgh district to meet with the miners' union, except on the basis of a strictly district conference, still stand as barriers to a complete settlement of the strike in this district. Union officials, however, predict that no union miners will return to work until agreements are signed by the members of the operators' association.

As a result they further predict that, after the recognition of the scale decided on at Cleveland it will be but a short time until the Pittsburgh operators' association will agree to sign on a basis of the Cleveland agreement, including the check-off proviso.

A general increase in wages, ranging from 36 to 58 per cent for the various classes of labor in the mines and around the coke ovens in the Fayette region will become effective today, it was also learned yesterday. Independent operators in that region openly admitted the new scale, but the H. C. Frick Coke Company, major operator, refused to confirm the announcement.

The action of the Fayette operators will test the hold of the United Mine Workers on the members they have added to their organization in that district since the opening of the strike. The Fayette region was not organized originally, but since April 1, the union has made a determined drive to organize the field and as a result many mines have been closed by strikes of former non-union miners affiliating with the unions.

In announcing the new wage scale, the operators assert that they will continue to ignore the union. They express the belief that the new wage scale will draw back many of the men who struck last spring, despite non-recognition of the union. If not, they assert that the wages will prove sufficiently attractive to bring from other sections all the workmen they need. The new Fayette wage scale is practically the same scale as was paid in 1920 and equals the highest scale ever paid in that region, operators say.

While the terms that will accompany the announcement of the Pittsburgh Coal Producers' Association return to the 1920-22 wage scale are yet to be decided by the scale committee in their meeting today, it is generally expected that the plan will be followed, as when the association announced more than a month ago that they were going to re-open their mines under President Harding's plan. At that time they addressed their announcement to the miners as individuals, not as union men.

Four mines in Washington county were reopened under troop protection.

SAVINGS resulting from capacity manufacture are now offered to the buyer of the Studebaker Special-Six. The new price of $1275 is $200 under its former price.

Studebaker reductions became effective August 1st after Studebaker had completed the biggest seven months in its 70 years' history. And at a time when Studebaker had 15,000 unfilled orders on hand! It is a Studebaker policy of long standing to share manufacturing savings with the customer.

The performance, durability, comfort and quality of the Special-Six are recognized everywhere. And here's new proof of its endurance: Studebaker's sales of repair parts, covering accidents as well as service, for the first seven months of 1922 were less than they were for the first seven months of 1919, in spite of the fact that 186,000 new cars were sold and put into operation since January 1, 1920.

The Special-Six at $1275 represents a new standard of value—the greatest value Studebaker has ever offered, and that means a value that is positively unapproached anywhere in the industry.

INSIDE FACTS ON CLEVELAND CONFERENCE BY T. H. WATKINS

A telegram to President Harding, under date of August 14th, has been made public by Mr. T. H. Watkins of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation, who attended the Cleveland Conference, in company with two of the large Central Pennsylvania Producers, F. E. Herriman, President of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation and D. C. Morgan, of the Pittsburgh and Shawmut Railroad and Allegheny River Mining Company.

Withing twenty-four hours after this telegram was dispatched, the Central Competitive Field Conference, one of the chief causes of past quarrels, was disrupted, and the machinery established for an immediate resumption of mining and an exhaustive public investigation of the industry prior to April 1st next.

The Miners' policy committee and the Operators present, agreed unanimously on the principle set forth in the telegram, which reads as follows:

TELEGRAM

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 14th, 1922.
To the President,
The White House
Washington, D. C.

It is my judgement that a prompt settlement of the coal strike now hinges upon the issue of compulsory arbitration as against compulsory inquiry applicable to the fixation of a scale of wage to become effective April first nineteen twenty-three, when the contemplated provisional wage scales will expire.

It is admitted by both parties to this dispute that a method must be found not only to procure a prompt resumption of mining but to prevent a recurrence of this deplorable crisis.

It appears to be the opinion of many operators that the only effective way to guarantee the peaceful negotiation of the wage scales to become effective April first next is to secure from the United Mine Workers at this time a commitment to submit their case to arbitration and to bind themselves now to accept the award of arbitrations on April first next.

An agreement to accept arbitration for April first next cannot be secured from the United Mine Workers willingly in my judgement.

An agreement wrung from an unwilling party is dangerous and not conducive to the future peace and harmony which is earnestly sought by all parties concerned.

The whole principle of compulsory arbitration is at variance with the traditions and spirit of American industry if not with the Constitution, just at present national strikes which deprive the public of the necessities of life are in violation of every elemental principle of civilization and fair play.

The question of compulsory arbitration in future disputes was exhaustively studied by the Roosevelt Anthracite Strike Commission of 1902, of which I had the honor to be a member.

The seven members of this Commission unanimously reported to President Roosevelt as follows:

"In order to secure the public against long-continued controversy and to make a coal famine or a famine in any other direction practically impossible we deem it essential that there should be some authority to conduct just such investigations as that you have called upon us to make."

There are some who have urged the Commission to recommend the adoption of compulsory arbitration so-called as the means of securing this desired result but we cannot see our way to recommend any such drastic measures. We do not believe that in the United States such a system would meet with general approval or with success. Apart from the apparent lack of constitutional power to enact laws providing for compulsory arbitration our industries are too vast and too complicated for the practical application of such a system.

"The public has the right when controversies cause it serious loss and suffering to know all the facts and so be able to fix the responsibility. In order to do this power must be given the authorized representatives of the people to act for them by conducting a thorough investigation into all the matters involved in the controversy."

"The chief benefit to be derived from the suggestion herein made lies in placing the real facts and the responsibility for such condition authoritatively before the people, that public opinion may crystallize and make its power felt."

After twenty years of subsequent experience in the coal industry I have no occasion to doubt the wisdom of this award, and on the other hand have had ample evidence of the turmoil, and ill-feeling and the breach of faith that are the aftermath of compulsory awards.

The proposal for Compulsory Inquiry advocated by the Roosevelt Commission of 1902 leaves both parties free to negotiate willingly on the basis of the recommendations of an impartial Commission which has had access to all the facts and whose published report has crystallized public opinion, which in the last analysis is the only compelling force in this country or any other democratic so-

It is my judgement that the limited conference to which I am not a party, now in session in Cleveland, should disband and that the operators from all districts here represented should immediately assemble and call on the National Scale Committee of the United Mine Workers to meet them and any other operators, and to negotiate an agreement containing both a provisional wage scale effective until April first, nineteen twenty-three, together with a provision for the appointment of a Commission of Inquiry composed of not more than seven impartial citizens of commanding public reputation for character and ability to make an exhaustive study of the whole industry and to transmit to you and the public prior to April first next its recommendations for the stabilization of the industry and the methods and bases of the coming wage scales.

If such an agreement can be consummated there is every reason to hope that reason and good faith can be restored in the coal industry, and that neither the operators or the miners will wish to deviate materially from the recommendations of this Commission or dare again to throttle the nation by depriving it of fuel.

When the public, the miners and the operators are all fully apprised of the facts and the true conditions within the industry there will be no occasion for the exercise of force or compulsion in reaching future agreements. Should any wilful group, however, violate these principles after the public has been fully informed of the facts and advised as to the proper procedure within the industry, then the Government, with the unanimous support of its citizens can take such steps as are requisite to the public welfare.

The convictions expressed in this telegram are concurred in by other operators representing large and important interests who are now here with me.

I have good reason to believe that these views are concurred in by the United Mine Workers and that an endorsement by the majority of operators and the Administration of the principle of compulsory inquiry as laid down by the Roosevelt Anthracite Strike Commission would result in a speedy and sound settlement of the coal strike.

An immediate expression from you will be helpful.

THOMAS H. WATKINS
(Address) The Hollenden
Cleveland, Ohio.

He not only makes spontaneous effort to understand, but to imitate.—Doctor Montessori.

Two Things Life Taught Him

The longer I live the more I am satisfied of two things: First, that the truest lives are those that are cut rose-diamond fashion, with many facets answering to the many-planned aspects of the world about them; secondly, that society is always trying in some way or other to grind us down to a single facet.—Oscar Wendell Holmes.

Bringing Back Old Times.

My little daughter, one dark, rainy day, came indoors with a wet hair-starved kitten, and on remonstrating with her to take it out at once, she became indignant and said: "You don't be-member, mamma when you was a little cold cat yourself."—Exchange.

Granada.

Granada, the last of the Spanish provinces on which the Moors retained a hold, was trod from that alien race by the forces of Ferdinand and Isabella the same year America was discovered, 1492.

Soldiers Allowed Midday Nap.
In peace times soldiers in the Italian army are allowed two hours in the middle of the day for a nap.

Optimistic Thought.

A man's own good breeding is the best security against another's ill manners.

"My ancestors," haughty little Heloise Aldyno told her nine-year-old playmate Hermione McGuire, "came over in the first boat, the Mayflower." "Well, mine came over," Hermione said stoutly, her blue Irish eyes flashing with spirit. "In the very next boat, the Jukeboxer."—Judge.

Miss Rose Baney and Miss Pike of Lock Haven, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Graffius and daughter Irene and Miss Lucy Baney of Fairmont, West Va., spent Friday with Mr. Graffius' sister Mrs. Maurice Bush.

Effects of Opposition.
The effects of opposition are wonderful. There are men who rise refreshed on hearing of a threat—men to whom a crisis which intimidates and paralyzes the majority, comes graceful and beloved as a bride—Emerson.

Where Brown Trout Live.
In streams no longer favorable to the brook trout, and there are many such due to logging operations, pollution, etc., the English brown trout, by nature a harder fish than our native fish, will still thrive, and such streams may be made to furnish good sport and a valuable food supply by stocking with brown trout.—All Out doors.

Should Use Judgment.
Teacher—When little George Washington told the truth about cutting down the cherry tree his father forgave him. Now, Henry, what lesson does this teach us? Henry—"It teaches us that we should learn when to tell the truth."

Her Prejudiced Attitude.
"Yassah, I knowed de cawn, confessed Brother Bogus. 'Owms right up, sah, dat I hit mah wife wid a neck yoke. But fun de way she's been howlin' and gwine on 'bout it since, you'd think I'd hit her wid a tou-ness wagon!"—Kansas City Star

Knew How it Was.
"Willie," the Sunday school teacher asked, "can you tell me why Rachel wept for her children?" "Mebbe it was because the preacher came before she had a chance to git them cleaned up."—Chicago Herald.

Device Saves Much Labor.
Concrete piles have been patented with pipes running through their centers through which water can be pumped to wash away the earth and permit them to sink under their own weight.

World is Unsympathetic.
Don't parade your troubles before the unsympathetic world. Bury them as a dog does old bones, and growl if anyone tries to dig them up.

Scrap Book Paste.
A simple and effective paste is made by covering the desired quantity of taploca with cold water, putting on the fire, and stirring. Add more water while it boils to make it of the consistency of paste. This can be used on wood, leather, paper, or rubber, and is especially good for scrap books and photographs.

PEACE! MINERS AND OPERATORS SIGN DISTRICT NO. TWO AGREEMENT

ALL SET TODAY FOR THE GREATEST DAY EVER SEEN IN CLEARFIELD

Everything's all set for one of the greatest Dollar Days the city has ever seen tomorrow. A crowd of observers going along the streets in the business section will watch the windows in the store in the cutting district, cannot but wonder at the values the merchants are offering for the horde of eager shoppers that will doubtless turn out of town and early tomorrow morning.

Even the store windows which the afternoon, will be lavishly going on behind closed doors in making the final preparation for the early morning rush that has become the marked Dollar Day happening. Last Spring, throngs of eager shoppers were awaiting the opening of the store doors, and in many instances employees had to be spirited in the rear entrance, unable to push their way thru the crowded entrances.

So many windows are already trimmed with Dollar Day offerings that it will pay anyone interest in it.

The car, one of the party's, was parked on the river bank. The car was scuttled, and the passengers were forced to walk several miles to reach their destination.

COLLINS WAS TO BE MARRIED ON DAY HE WAS MURDERED

Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 21.—Michael Collins, Irish leader, was to have been married to Kitty Keenan, of County Longford on the very day a rebel bullet cut short his life. It was learned today that the Irish State chief, whose remains were honored by a sorrowing nation, is they, in a state here today, had frequently postponed celebration of his wedding to coincide with the peace treaty, which he had once sworn to. They had decided they must wait until the light was won but had finally on August 21st as the eventful day.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 23.—Ten men were held in the county jail here charged with the wholesale looting of freight cars in the New York Central yard at the railroad yard in Huron and Cleveland. The men were given preliminary hearings on Tuesday and were held in jail on $10,000 bail each. A man named to be brought before a jury and who was out on $10,000 bail for appearance at the preliminary hearing failed to appear when he was called and a warrant was issued for his arrest. The four men named in the indictment by the chief of the New York Central detectives, in Huron, O., are: J. J. Kramer, J. J. Kramer, J. J. Kramer, and J. J. Kramer. They are charged with the wholesale looting of freight cars in the New York Central yard at the railroad yard in Huron and Cleveland.

CONFERENCE TODAY ON RAIL STRIKE IS FLAT FAILURE

New York, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The conference today between brotherhood leaders and a majority of the operators failed to reach an agreement. A general settlement of the operators' strike was not reached. According to W. M. Clark, Vice-President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, the conference was a flat failure. Representatives of fifty trainmen went into session this afternoon after the labor chiefs had withdrawn to their own headquarters. There was nothing doing so far as they were concerned. Warren P. Stone, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and his fellow members reported to Port M. Jewell, head of the strike, in whose behalf they are acting, that the conference had failed.

NEW "MYSTERY" LOCOMOTIVE OF N. Y. C. LINES ALSO PROVES TO BE NEW "WONDER"

An extraordinary locomotive, "No. 8000," which is expected to prove a most important contribution to motive power progress, has just been put in service on the Michigan Central Railroad of the New York Central Lines. Attracting widespread attention from the public press, it has been popularly described as "the mystery engine," because it was built in secret at the Lima Locomotive Works at Lima, Ohio, and was known to but a handful of men directly concerned until it made its appearance ready for heavy freight duty at Detroit the past month. The new locomotive in general appearance presents striking departures from the familiar features of the ordinary locomotive, and in numerous details of its design and construction it is just as different from any predecessor as its looks indicate. The new locomotive was planned and constructed under the personal direction of President A. H. Smith of the New York Central Lines, who specified the several most important main accomplishments to be sought by the new design and made provision for the use of every up-to-date improvement of proved worth, brought to the last degree of refinement for economy and efficiency. The engine is of Mikado type, but contains numerous features never before incorporated in any locomotive. Meets Expectations. Locomotive 8000, in its preliminary tests and subsequent daily service hauling heavy trains between Detroit and Toledo has performed in a way highly satisfactory to the New York Central officials and the Lima builders. In its initial road test, it hauled 100 heavily laden coal cars and later easily pulled a train of 140 cars containing more than 9,000 tons of coal, indicating a capacity of more than 150 cars and load in excess of 12,000 tons. A great stir was caused at Detroit when one locomotive hauled thirteen box cars loaded with stoves upon the opening of the Michigan Central Belt Line, October 3, 1888, the contest with the performance of "8000," indicating the great strides in motive power in the past thirty-four years. Summed up, Locomotive 8000 is considered the first word in efficiency and economy in freight motive power. These are its principal merits. (1) For its weight, it will deliver more power than any locomotive in the world. (2) It will exert more tractive effort per ton of coal consumed than any locomotive ever built. (3) It will prove a locomotive easier to operate and repair than its predecessors, thus making for quick turn-around and safety. Locomotive 8000 was designed and built to expedite the movement of heavy freight trains, such as refrigerator trains, loaded with perishables. With an increase in weight of less than two per cent compared with the heaviest Mikados in service on the Michigan Central, No. 8000 has an increase of nearly eight per cent in tractive power derived from the forward cylinders and an increase of nearly eight per cent in the weight of the engine.

PACT SIGNED LAST NIGHT WILL START UP ALL COLLIERIES

Miners Will Return To Work On The Old Scale Which Was In Effect When Strike Started

BIG STRIKE OVER

The bituminous coal strike, so far as District No. 2, embracing the mine operations in this section of Pennsylvania is concerned, was settled at 10:30 last night in the Altoona conference when the sub-scale committee representing the mine leaders of the local district accepted an agreement presented by Charles O'Neill, secretary of the Central Coal Association, which had already been voted upon favorably by the sub-scale committee of seven men representing the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Pennsylvania and the Central Coal Association. The agreement as presented by the operators had been argued over for more than six hours during the afternoon and evening by the mine leaders, three sessions being held before final acceptance came and the joint conference with the operators' sub-scale committee. According to the agreement, the miners will resume their work immediately at the wage scale with all its provisions that was in effect at the time of the walkout, with the exception of a portion of Rule 25 having to do with their working thirty days after the first scale meeting between their leaders and the operators and adjustment of pay after April 1 on the new scale. The new agreement, signed last night, will be effective until March 31, 1923, and is strictly a district agreement. The check-off system will remain in force and there is no reference to the Cleveland conference or agreement in the agreement signed, thus it is distinctly a district agreement with advantages to (Continued on Page 6) increase of over 26 per cent when its locomotive "booster" is cut in. The "booster" has the effect of turning the trailer wheels into driving wheels.

The designers of this locomotive in addition to securing the greatest possible tractive effort with a minimum weight at which strength would not be lost, have incorporated the following features: (1) The use of fuel and water. A superheater of new development has been applied which produces a higher temperature of steam than the type of superheaters in general use.

Until the invention of the "booster," the engine trailer wheels have merely carried the weight of the back end of the engine. The "booster" is an auxiliary engine geared to the trailer axle and is cut in and cut out either automatically or by the engineer as the occasion requires. On Locomotive 8000 a tractive effort of 74,500 pounds is obtainable. Of this figure 11,000 pounds are delivered by the booster. The remaining 63,500 are obtained from the forward cylinders.

Refinements in design and the use of alloy of steel and hollow axles and crank pins have made it possible to eliminate a great amount of weight ordinarily necessary. The weight of the locomotive, exclusive of tender, is 334,000 pounds. The tender, which has a capacity of 10,000 gallons of water and sixteen tons of coal, weighs 199,700 pounds. The boiler carries 200 pounds of steam. The main cylinders are 28 inches in diameter, with 30-inch stroke. The diameter of the driving wheels is 63 inches.

For the first time in the history of American railroading superheated steam is used to operate the air pump, feed-water pump, booster engine and headlight turbo generator. Instead of the customary injector, a feed-water pump takes the water from the tender and forces it through a heater into the boiler, the heat for the heater being obtained from the exhaust steam. The condenser of which is returned to the boiler through a filter, which eliminates any oil which may have been carried over from the cylinders into the exhaust steam.

The feed-water heater is located at the front of the engine, above the headlight and near the top of the tank, so as to give the condensate pipe line plenty of fall to return the condensed water to the filter at the rear of the engine. The heater is a jacket mounted in place of the left side of the smoke-box on the boiler.

Another important departure from standard railway practice is the feature of superheating the steam before it reaches the main throttle. In Locomotive 8000 the steam from the boiler passes through the steam dome into the dry pipe and thence to the superheater units, the dry pipe, which is outside of the boiler, being connected at the forward end direct to the superheater.

Before the steam leaves the dome it is passed through a separator which collects any water that may be carried in the steam, the water being automatically returned to the boiler, which, together with the taking of steam from the highest possible point of boiler, insures absolutely dry steam of unusually high temperature. From the superheated steam passages in the heater, the superheated steam is conveyed to the throttle, the location of which is in what might be termed a throttle-box which is on top of the smoke-box and just forward of the smoke stack, another unusual departure from existing designs and practice and calculated to get the steam to the cylinders from the throttle in the most direct way possible.

Careful attention has been given to the application of devices to facilitate handling the locomotive by engineers, the special equipment consisting of power reverse gear, automatic stoker and an automatic grate-shaking device which shortens the time the engine must spend over ash pits. The interior arrangement of the cab is such that the engineer and fireman can perform the necessary duties in connection with the operation of the engine with minimum of movement from their positions on either side of the cab, the physical effort of each being practically nil. Even the blowing of the whistle is pneumatically operated, an air valve being located near the side of the cab and immediately in front of the engineer.

As is customary on the Michigan Central, the engine is equipped with water scoop, which eliminates stops and consequent delays for taking water.

Before being put into service, the engine was inspected by President Smith, Vice-President E. D. Bronner and General Manager Henry Shreve of the Michigan Central Railroad, who were well pleased and expressed themselves as delighted with what had been accomplished by the designers and builders and predicted a performance by this locomotive heretofore unexpected on any railroad.

Locomotive 8000 has more than lived up to expectations in the short time it has been in service. When it has been in service a sufficient length of time dynamometer tests will be taken and results very definitely determined.

Progress in motive power development is more than ever a struggle for heavier tonnage-haul capacity with the greatest fuel economy possible and minimum operating and maintenance costs. The factor of safety is a dominating one in all considerations.

During and immediately after the war, the railroads were taxed to their utmost to keep the power then in use in operation. So depleted was the motive power of American railroads at the termination of Federal control that immediate embarkation on a program of rehabilitation and replacement was necessary on the part of the roads which sustained the heaviest burdens of the war. The situation was such that little or no time was to be had for change of design or study for improvement, the problem being for complete concentration on the maintenance of the power equipment on the rails and keeping up of replacements as far as possible. Then came the business depression which was first felt in the fall of 1920.

A breathing spell was had and in looking forward to renewal of business activity and the meeting of future motive power requirements "progress" and "advancement" again became the key words of the railroad engineers and the locomotive builders. Increasing the efficiency of motive power necessarily limited to broad-gauge width, divisional clearances and bridge-load capacities by a revival of intensive development was the goal sought.

Engine 8000 seems to be a notable stride forward in the solution of these problems.—(New York Central Lines Magazine.)

There should be a veritable Thanksgiving in this region of Pennsylvania today. After a period of idleness, during which time thousands of dollars in wages have been lost, families have suffered privations, children the comforts which are their birthrights, peace again reigns in the soft coal field known as District No. 2.

It is exceptionally gratifying that District No. 2 is to retain its identity as one of the factors in the soft coal industry and under the agreement made the miners and operators of this district are left free to take advantage of a district agreement in the future. President Brophy of the United Mine Workers is to be congratulated in being broad minded enough to see that the welfare of the operators in this matter of district agreements is the welfare of the miners as well.

A lot of fellows are taking a lot of the joy out of the prospect of prosperity in this region right now by trying to figure out to whom the victory belongs. To our mind there is no victory for anybody. Suffice it to say that the miners retain everything they had when the strike took place. Both have retained the benefits to accrue to the coal industry in this region through district bargaining. We can see nothing that either side has won to crow about but both have lost so much that they will do well to remember the strike of 1922 when they meet to formulate scale next spring.

AMERICANS, HOME BUILDERS.

Home building and construction in general for the first six months of 1922 has eclipsed all previous records. The Keystone State has 2,200,000 families, according to the last census, and 1,700,000 are home owners, outranking all other States, with Ohio second. This has been brought about without the semblance of a building boom. No better evidence of thrift is needed. The man who builds himself a home is building for the future, and the man who owns his home is generally found in the ranks of good citizens. His thrift and energy supply others with the things which make life worth living.

According to the figures of one of the statistical bureaus, during the last six months the total amount of work let for residential construction in this country was 682,663,000, an increase of 89 per cent over last year; $228,932,000 for public works and utilities, 19 per cent increase; $280,329,000 for business buildings, 58 per cent increase, and $123,181,000 for industrial plants, an increase of 42 per cent. America is fast becoming a nation of home owners.

We'll agree to this. A Punsutawney business man remarked that he thought every decent motorist should be allowed to carry a gun. "The other night my wife was going out the Indiana road in her coupe and just as she was making the curve before reaching the Irv North home, some fool tried to pass her just as she was driving by another car coming up the hill in the opposite direction. He made the rifle, but struck the wheels of my wife's car and came very near upsetting her over the bank. The fool driver never looked back, just scooted.

"I would have loved to have been in the car with my wife with a nice, big gatling gun nestling in my hand. I would have drilled a hole in every square inch of the machine ahead of me. A quart of that guy's blood would have made a lovely drink for me this morning."

Everyone seems to know what a fair price would be for the other fellow's goods.

A ban on spooning on a moonlight night would get more support if it ever had been discovered that moonlight had any other purposes.

An American hired to boost the value of the ruble would begin by printing advertisements on the under side of Lenin's paper currency. Good idea.

FOR THE EYES OF POSTERITY

Satisfactory Way Said to Have Been Found to Preserve Newspapers for Indefinite Period.

How to so pickle newspapers that they can be preserved indefinitely in the public libraries is a problem which has apparently been solved, according to the American Paper and Pulp Association.

Eight years of experimenting, participated in by three big New York newspapers at a cost of $5,000 a year each, under the supervision of the New York public library, has taught librarians how to preserve for posterity newspaper files. The solution seems simple, being the mounting of each newspaper sheet between two sheets of thin Japanese tissue, shutting the air from the original sheets, reducing its acidity but slightly, and strengthening the paper. Bound volumes of the mounted pages are now in constant daily use, and are free from the wear and tear which destroyed the untreated newspapers.

The New York experiments have been so successful that a big Western newspaper has sent representatives to New York to study and adopt the practice for use there.

The first investigation was made in Boston, and the library there tried to persuade the newspapers to print library editions on an extra paper, but the expense was too great. This is now done by a London paper, and was tried by a Brooklyn paper, but the cost was prohibitive.

In the New York experiments silk was first used, but the Japanese tissue was found the best for the purpose, as it hermetically sealed the newspaper pages from the air. Shellacs, varnishes and other substances were tried with little success. Under the method now in use the operator wets a glass or steel-covered table, lays down a sheet of tissue, with the pasting machine, rice paste is put on, then in turn the newspaper page, paste and tissue, when the page is dried and pressed under a gas-heated mangle.

When they came out into the street, most of the town was out to see them. Deciding that knickerbockers must not be the thing in Noblesville, they hurried to get under the shelter of their car.

A man came up to them and invited them to stay longer as guests of the town. They refused, saying that they were in a hurry to get to Warsaw.

"Warsaw?" he stammered. "Why aren't you the two girls who are burning your way from New York to Indianapolis, and whose picture was in the paper this afternoon? We have been expecting two girls all day and as soon as I saw you go into the library I thought you were the ones and had gone in to see what the Noblesville press had to say about you, and I hurried around and told everybody you were here. What'll I do?" Indianapolis News.

More than 3,000 children are in attendance, says the Christian Science Monitor. While the primary object is to provide a place of refuge from the hot streets, the school has also a distinct educational value. The morning session is devoted to "playwork" and includes basketry, sewing and radio instruction, story-telling, kindergarten activities and occasional moving picture exhibitions. In the afternoon come games, hikes and organized sports.

Old Henry's Wooing

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"Hello, Hank! Saving up to get married?"

Old Henry Dobson, who had been one of the bookkeepers of the Friend company for nearly a score of years, looked up sheepishly and thrust away the bills he was counting.

"Better hurry up; not much time to lose, Hank!"

Henry Dobson must have been fifty, and why he had been so long with the company and still retained a subordinate position was not difficult to see. Honest, plodding, industrious, he had not the qualities that make for success. An elderly-looking man, unobtrusive, he went his way, the butt of mild witticisms on the part of the younger men.

No one knew anything about old Henry, nor where he lived, and nobody cared.

The same applied equally to Miss Rowell, of the correspondence department. Miss Rowell had been there nine years, and looked just a plain, pale, rather faded old maid.

"Say, Miss Rowell, Hank Dobson reckons he's going to get married!"

Sadie, the telephone girl, said this, and waited for the quick blush to appear on Miss Rowell's face.

"Is he, really? Oh, isn't that nice?"

"Say," said Sadie to her friend, Agnes Strutt, "wouldn't it be a joke to make Amy Rowell think Hank Dobson's in love with her?"

"And to make him think she's in love with him?"

"How'll we do it?"

"Watch me!" said Sadie cryptically.

On the following morning Miss Rowell found a neat little bunch of violets on her desk, with a scrap of postcard attached, bearing in writing the words, "With H. D.'s compliments."

Her attention appeared plain. The girls, watching her, and many quiet giggles as they saw her surreptitiously and to sniff the fragrance of the flowers.

"Say, Hank, that's a fine bunch of flowers you sent Miss Rowell."

"I didn't send her any flowers. What'd I want to send her flowers for?" protested Henry Dobson.

"Well, don't you let on you didn't. She's coming to thank you."

Little Miss Rowell stopped at Henry Dobson's desk. "Thank you so much for your beautiful flowers, Mr. Dobson," she said in a quiet voice.

A few days later Henry Dobson found a pair of socks on his desk, bearing a card, "With kind remembrances from A. R." Examination disclosed the fact that the heels were gone.

"Say, Miss Rowell, Mr. Dobson's had such a lovely pair of socks from some one," said Sadie.

Little Miss Rowell raised her head indignantly. "Who sent them?" she asked.

"Oh, Miss Rowell! Oh, Miss Rowell!" they teased her.

It was funny to see how nervously Miss Rowell avoided Henry Dobson's desk for several days thereafter.

The cream of the joke came a few days later. Miss Rowell opened a little cardboard box. Inside was a ten-year-old valentine, procured from some old dealer who had had it rotting on his shelf since the days when valentines remained in fashion. The lace paper edge was torn and maddened. The picture represented an elderly spinster with a long, red nose and underneath was printed:

I think you're out for marriage.

As all the world can see, I hope you'll find a man to your mind. As long as it isn't me.

The scander had scratched out the last word and substituted "H. D."

Miss Rowell's right hand jerked convulsively. The valentine, torn in half, dropped into the wastebasket.

Twelve struck. Hank Dobson came slowly into the correspondence department as the girls were getting on their hats. Miss Rowell rose up, smiling.

"Oh, Sadie, you know I'm not coming back on Monday?" she asked.

"Not coming back, Miss Rowell? There was genuine regret. Then, impulsively: "Oh, Miss Rowell, if it's because we've bothered you so much, won't you overlook it? I—I'm really ashamed."

"My dear, you haven't bothered me at all," Miss Rowell smiled. "But my husband and I are starting a little poultry farm—the dream of our lives—"

"Oh, Miss Rowell! I mean—why, Miss Rowell, you and Mr. Dobson have got married!"

"Ten years ago, my dear," smiled Amy Rowell.

The First Wallpaper in America.

Wall papers did not begin to come into this country until the second quarter of the Eighteenth century. Even then they were specially ordered by the individual householders from their dealers in London and Paris, rather than carried from the general retail trade. Thomas Hancock, for instance, ordered in 1737, a specially made paper from his stationer, Thomas Rowe of London, and in his letter giving the order speaks of another paper similarly imported by a friend of his, three or four years earlier. By 1745 however wall paper was in retail stock here, Charles Hargrave of Philadelphia advertising it in that year. But certainly it was not in general use until 1750. By that time it had become enormously popular and a host of merchants in all the larger towns were advertising new importations with the arrival of every ship—Charles Ackema in Arts and Decorations.

NARROW ESCAPE

FROM LIGHTNING

A house at Hyde City belonging to W. J. Duffon and occupied by Mrs. Lillian Hancy, was badly damaged by lightning during the storm Friday evening.

Mrs. Hancy, who had just retired, was thrown from her bed clear across the room and severely shocked. The bolt having torn the lath and plaster from the wall twisting the rods of the bed almost double, passed thru the bed and down thru the floor tearing the partition from between the two rooms down stairs into the cellar, after tearing a hole clear thru the piano and doing considerable damage to other furniture.

A Winter Comes

A.S.M. Hutchinson
©1921 A.S.M. HUTCHINSON

BEGIN HERE TODAY
After eight years of married life, MARK SABRE discovered that he had cut himself off from human sympathy and appreciation. His prosaic and snobbish wife, MABEL, fails to understand his poetic temperament. At the firm of Fortune, East and Sabre, school and church outposts, Sabre is derided by his peers and a partnership, once promised to him, is promised to an associate, TWYNING. Suddenly one who understands him returns to his life. This is Nona.

Nona, an old sweetheart, now the wife of the dashing Lord Tybar, Sabre learns that she is unhappy with Tybar and Nona tells him that she chose wrong. "I ought to have married you, Mark," she breathes between Mabel and Sabre. Then Sabre learns that Twyning has become a partner.

GO ON WITH THE STORY
Sabre remained standing at his desk. He had a tiny ball of paper in his hand and he rolled it round between his finger and thumb, round and round and round and round. In his mind was a recollection. "You have struck your tents and are upon the march."

He thought, "This has been coming a long time. . . . It's my way of looking at things has done this. I'm getting so I've got nowhere to turn. It's no good pretending I don't feel this. I feel it most frightfully. . . . It was rottenly done. I leaped my back. Plotted against me, or they wouldn't have sprung it on me like that. This frightful feeling of being alone in the place. More empty at home. . . . And now, there's this. . . . You have struck your tents and are upon the march." . . . Yes. Yes.

He suddenly recollected Nona's letter. He took it from his pocket and opened it, and the second event was discharged upon him. She wrote from their town house: "Mark, take me away—Nona."

His emotions leapt to her with most terrible violence. He felt his heart leap against his breast as though, engine of his tumult, it would burst its bonds and to her. He struck his hand upon the desk. He said aloud, "Yes! Yes!" He remembered his words, "If you ever feel you can't bear it, tell me—Tell me."

He began to write plans to her. He would come to London tomorrow. . . . She should come to the station if she could; if not, he would be at the Great Western Hotel. She would telephone to him there and they could arrange to meet and discuss what they should do. . . . He would like to go away with her directly they met; there were certain things to see. He wrote, "But I can only take you."

His pen stopped. Familiar words! He repeated them to himself, and their conclusion and their circumstance appeared and stood, as with a sword, across the passage of his thoughts. "But I can only lead you downwards. I cannot lead you upwards. . . ."

As with a sword— He sat back in his chair and gazed upon this armed intruder to give it battle.

III
The morning passed and the afternoon while still he sat, no more moving than to sink lower in his seat as the battle joined and as he most dreadfully suffered in its most dreadful onsets. Towards five o'clock he put out his hand without moving his position and drew towards him the letter he had begun. The action was as that of one utterly undone. He very slowly tore it across, and then across again, and so into tiniest fragments till his fingers could no more fasten upon them. He dropped his arm away and opened his hand, and the white pieces fluttered in a little cloud to the floor. . . .

Presently he drew himself up to the table and began to write, writing very slowly because his hand trembled so. In half an hour he blotted the few lines on the last sheet. . . . So, simply what I want to do is to let you step—if we take it—be mine, not yours. We shall for get absolutely that you ever wrote. . . . It is as though it had never been written. On Tuesday I will write and ask you, "Shall I come up to you?" So if you say "Yes" the action will have been entirely mine. It will start there. This hasn't happened. And during these days in between, just think like anything over what I've said. Honor can't have any degree, Nona, any more than truth can have any degree, whatever else the world can quibble to its own partition. These truths are just truth and honor is just honor. And a marriage vow is a pledge of honor, and if one breaks it one breaks one's honor, never mind what the excuse is. There's no conceivable way of getting out of that. That's what I shall ask you to do on Tuesday and I'm just warning you so you shall have time to think beforehand."

He took his pen, and scolded his hand, and wrote: "And your reply, when I ask you, whatever it is, shall bring me light into darkness, unutterable darkness. . . ."

He could hear the homeward movements about the office. It was time to go. He wheeled his bicycle to the letter box at the corner of The Precincts. As he dropped in his letter, the evening edition came bawling around the corner.

AUSTRIA
DECLARIS WAR
ON SERVIA
He shook his head at the paper the boy held out to him and rode away. What had that kind of thing to do with him?

IV
Unutterable darkness! He lived within it during the days that followed while he awaited the day appointed to write to Nona again. Whatever she said when he asked, whichever way she answered him, he would be brought relief from his intolerable stress. If she maintained honor above love, his weakness, he knew, would be welded into strength, as the presence of another brings enormous support to timidity; if she declared for love—his mind surged within him at the imagination of being duplicated this winter, Charles H. Searles, Editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, forecast today, Searles, who has made a careful survey of the fuel situation, believes the railroads of the country will not be able to haul all the coal that is mined and required to meet the business and domestic needs. While the Federal Government now is rationing fuel it will have to go much further to save the people from suffering and business from serious embarrassment this winter, Searles said. If the Government does not revive the fuel administration which, operated during the war and in the winter of 1920 then the states and cities will have to take the necessary step, he said.

Fuel Conference Today.
Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—The most important fuel conference since the Pennsylvania Fuel Commission was organized was to assemble here today at 2 o'clock. Representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission will meet with members of the six regional committees to thresh out the whole question of bituminous coal production, distribution and regulation in the State.

FISHING FOR BASS
Bill O'Brien and Jack Mohney, two of Clearfield's most noted and devoted piscatorial artists, drove down to Pine Creek yesterday afternoon for the purpose of fishing for bass today. They have already made some fine catches on that stream this season.

Searles Predicts Great Fuel Shortage
Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—Lightless night, congested streets and service, a shortage of power, a shortage of industry and a shortage of transportation during the winter and a coal shortage on the probability of a bursting away once forever too squeamish principles which for years, hedging about his conduct on this side and on that, had profited nothing those on whose behalf they had been erected and on his own life had desolated into barrenness. He was little disposed to divert attention to the international disturbance which now were rumbling across the newspapers in portentous and enormous headlines. Ireland was pressed away. It was all Europe now—throne, chancelleries, councils, armies.

The cauldron whose seething and bubbling had entertained some, fidgeted some nothing at all concerned, suddenly boiled over, and poured in boiling fat upon the flames, and pointed in flames upon the hearts of every man's concerns. On Friday the Stock Exchange closed. On Saturday Germany declared war on Russia. In Sunday's papers Sabre read of the panic run on the banks, people lighting to convert their notes into gold. One London bank had suspended payment. Many had shut out failure only by minutes when midday permitted them to close their doors. People were besieging the provision shops to lay in stores of food. And poured in flames upon the hearts of every man's concerns. . . . All his concerns, the crisis with Nona, with his honor and his love, that awaited determination, were disputed their place in his mind by the incredible and enormous events that each new hour discharged upon the world.

The news of Tuesday morning caused him at six o'clock in the evening to have been standing two hours in the great throng that filled Market Square gazing towards the office of the County Times. Our mobilization, our resolve to stand by France if the German fleet came into the Channel, lastly, most awfully pregnant of all, our obligations to Belgium—that had been the morning's news. That afternoon the prime minister was to make a statement. A great murmur swelled up from the waiting crowd, a great movement pressed it forward towards the County Times offices. On the first-floor balcony men appeared dragging a great board faced with paper, on the paper enormous lettering. The board was pulled out sideways. The man last through the window took a step forward and swung the letters into view.

ULTIMATUM TO GERMANY EXPIRES MIDNIGHT
Sabre said aloud, "My God! War!" As a retreating wave harshly withdrawing upon the reluctant passers, there sounded from the crowd an enormous intonation of breath. An instant stuporous silence, the water poised for return. Down! A shattering roar, tremendous, wordless. The figure of Pike, the editor, appeared upon the balcony, in his shirt sleeves, his long hair wild about his face, in his hands that which caught the roar as it were by the throat, stopped it and broke it into anew on a burst of exultant clamor. A Union Jack. He shook it wildly with both hands above his head. The roar broke into a tremendous chant, "God Save the King!"

CHAPTER III
I
He approached Penny Green and reduced for the first time the hard peace at which he had been riding. And realized also the emotions which subconsciously had been driving him along. All the way he had been saying "War!" What he wanted, most terribly, was to say it aloud to someone. He wanted to say it to Mabel. He had a sudden great desire to see Mabel and tell her about it and talk to her about it. He felt a curiously protective feeling to ward her. He ran into the house and into the morning room. Mabel was not there. It was almost dim. She would be in her room. He ran upstairs. She was standing before her dressing table and turned to him in surprise. "Whatever—" "I say, it's war!"

MAIN & COMPANY GIVE FINAL REPORT ON STATE AUDIT
Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—Recommendations for modernizing the book-keeping system of the State Treasury featured the final report of Main & Company, certified public accountants, employed by Auditor General Samuel S. Lewis to examine the accounts of the State Treasury. The report made public today was forwarded to Governor Sprout and the candidates for Governor, Gifford Pinchot and John A. MacSparan. Besides summarizing the results of the seven previous sections of their report the Auditors urged a State budget system as the one means of avoiding in the future the irregularities in handling State funds which they said they had discovered during their examination. In a statement issued at the same time Auditor General Lewis said that the budget recommendations were a matter for the consideration either of the State Treasurer or the commission for the reorganization of State government authorized by the Legislature and appointed by Governor Sprout. A copy of the report was forwarded to Clyde L. King, Chairman of the Citizens Committee appointed by Gifford Pinchot.

POLICE CHIEF LEGION MAN

Guy R. Molony, Superintendent of New Orleans' "Finest," Will Call Legionnaires to Aid.

Confronted with the task of handling a crowd of 150,000 visitors to the American Legion convention in New Orleans, Oe. 18 to 21, Police Superintendent Guy R. Molony will call his brother Legionnaires into action. Superintendent Molony, an active Legion member, has announced that 1,000 uniformed Legionnaires will assist his police force in regulating the large crowds thronging the convention parade route and will serve as provost guards in the business district. During a recent trip to Kansas City Superintendent Molony investigated conditions prevailing in that city during last year's American Legion convention. He discovered that city and police officials had no criticism to make concerning the way in which the 150,000 visiting ex-servicemen conducted themselves, and stated that Kansas City officials would welcome the opportunity to have the organization again choose Kansas City as their convention city.

BUNKS FOR THE LEGION MEN
V. A. W. Steger, Chairman of National Convention Housing Committee, Has Completed Plans.

Every man to his own taste in "bunks," says V. A. W. Steger, chairman of the housing committee of the American Legion national convention, to be held in New Orleans next October. Convention visitors will be housed in a variety of ways. While the bulk of the crowd will choose the hotels and rooms in New Orleans homes, there will be an opportunity for a substantial percentage to remain on the Pullman cars and the steamboats and ocean liners which take them to the convention city. Mr. Steger has obtained a hotel rate of $1.50 a day without bath and $2.50 a day with bath. More than 14,000 visitors can be housed in the Pullman cars, which will be provided with all conveniences of a modern hotel. A special arrangement with railroads will enable the convention guest to live on his Pullman car for about $2 a day, and a uniformly low rate will also prevail in rooms in New Orleans homes. Those doughboys who prefer to return to the barracks life for five days may be quartered in New Orleans' $15,000,000 army supply base and in various halls and lodge rooms. Reservations for rooms, Mr. Steger has announced, must be made through the visitor's American Legion state adjutant, who will confirm them with the convention housing committee.

HAVE ARMY ON SHORT NOTICE
Government Could Provide Ample Military Protection in Any Emergency, Pershing Says.

An army large enough to guard every important bridge and railway terminal, all important industries and coal mines, as well as governmental buildings, could be placed in the field on short notice by the United States government, Gen. John J. Pershing declared in a statement recently issued, telling what could be done if this country were invaded. Eighteen regular war strength infantry divisions, of reserves, composed of 600,000 men, an expanded National Guard with 500,000 men and regular army units, augmented by volunteers to approximately 175,000 men, could be made quickly available, the general said. "The national defense act of 1920," Pershing's statement declared, "prescribed that the organized peace establishment, including the regular army, the National Guard and the organized reserves, shall include all of those divisions and other military organizations necessary to form the basis of a complete and immediate mobilization for the national defense in the event of a national emergency declared by congress."

"The evident intent," the statement continues, "is that the system of national defense shall be definitely organized, that the military units required for service in any emergency shall be constituted in time of peace, and that each of them shall be prepared to undertake its initial mission in time to meet the requirements of the situation."

How to Make and Use It

XXV. USEFUL THINGS TO REMEMBER

Adding anything to the efficiency of a set.

That a variable grid-leak can be made with pencil marks on paper and may be altered by erasing or adding lines.

That some tubes are best for detectors, others for amplification and others for transmitting or as oscillators.

That it is often cheaper to buy ready-made accessories than to make them.

That all joints in wires (except in binding-posts) should be soldered.

That the ground connection should be soldered to a water, gas or similar pipe or to a large copper plate buried in the ground.

That the steel girder or frame of a building makes a good ground.

That sending or transmitting sets must have a license to comply with the law.

That the fire departments have special regulations regarding the installation of aials.

That an aerial cannot be placed across a street without permission.

That aials do not attract lightning and if provided with a gap or lightning switch are perfectly safe.

That the best in the way of materials is always cheapest in the end.

That when using a sending set the low voltage should be turned on first or the tube may be ruined.

That in a sending set the battery should always be turned off when the phone circuit when not in use.

That a sending set is always better with a counterpoise than with a ground.

That it does not pay to try to make certain instruments.

That while wireless telephones are so easily adjusted and simple a child may use them, they are also very delicate affairs and are easily put out of adjustment or ruined by carelessness.

That you must not expect too much for your money in ready-made or home-made sets.

That a set may act very differently on different days or under different conditions.

That you should not condemn your instruments until you are sure the fault is not in yourself.

That loose connections, poor insulation, poor ground, poor joints in wires, worn insulation, wires crossing and many other small matters may put a set completely out of business.

That you can seldom improve upon a ready-made set by adding anything to it, but can do better by building a new set.

That every accessory or piece of apparatus is made for a specific purpose and that you should consult the manufacturers or dealers as to the best for your purpose before purchasing.

That the most expensive sets are not always the best as oftentimes flash, cabinets and elaborate fittings add to cost without increasing efficiency.

That while a receiving set may be made for use inside a safety match box such things are merely toys and are not for household use.

That when a dealer advertises that a cheap set can receive signals from a certain distance, be sure to find out if he means code signals from radio telegraph stations or sounds of voices, music, etc. No one can guarantee how far a set will receive as too many outside factors influence this.

That like everything else each and every maker claims his sets are the best. Investigate several before buying.

That anyone with the least mechanical ability can build wireless telephone sets if they purchase the parts which require special knowledge, skill or devices for making.

That the prices of most sets do not include batteries, tubes or phones.

That a storage battery must be recharged as soon as it becomes weak or your set will not work.

That the vacuum-tube is one of the most delicate devices ever invented and should be treated accordingly.

That no license is required for receiving sets and the air is free to all who want to listen-in.

That all broadcasting stations publish their daily programs.

That the most interferences are the nearby sending stations. So don't add to others' troubles by sending unless you have good reasons or are sincere in your experiments.

That an ordinary telephone horn attached to a head telephone receiver will increase the sounds somewhat and will act as a loud speaker.

That a variable-condenser helps fine tuning.

That the filament battery of a vacuum tube set may be a dry battery, but that it is more expensive in the end than a storage battery.

That the Ultra Audion circuit has the plate circuit fed back to the honey-comb coil and amounts to a regenerative set.

That the best type of vacuum-bulb receiving set is the regenerative with amplifiers.

That each step of amplification requires another tube.

That if there are too many turns on the inductance they may be taken off to secure tuning.

That the distance you can receive depends upon various climatic and other conditions.

That the filament lighting does not always mean the set is operating properly.

That if filament rheostat is turned on suddenly the filament may be paralyzed and must be left to recuperate before it will glow.

That burning the filament too brightly wastes the filament and shortens the life of the tube without

HOUSE LOSES NO TIME PASSING THE HARDING COAL BILL

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—The administration bill for creation of a federal commission to obtain all facts possible relating to the coal industry and on which the miners and operators were denied representation was passed by the House, 219 to 55.

The House refused to accept as a substitute for the administration coal investigating coal committee the Bland measure, which would have given miners and operators representation.

After long debate the motion to substitute the Bland bill was rejected, 126 to 75. The House also voted down a proposal to cut the size of the commission from nine to five members.

Confers With Harding

Attorney General Daugherty conferred with President Harding regarding the coal situation today and it was indicated afterward that a state-

ent was being prepared at the White House giving what steps were taken by the administration to protect the interest of the public.

Alternative plans for the maintenance of fair prices for coal and for its equitable distribution during the past strike periods were presented to President Harding today by Secretary Hoover.

One plan as presented for the President's approval was understood to provide for the creation of a Federal fuel distribution agency along the lines of the voluntary machinery operating under Federal Fuel Distributor Spencer. It also would authorize the Interstate Commerce Commission to assume great policies in the assuming of freight cars. The other proposal was supposed to provide for a coal purchasing corporation which would stabilize fuel prices by the fixation of a fair price for coal bought and sold by the Government.

ADDRESS LETTER TO EDITORS OF ALL
REPUBLICAN PAPERS TELLING THEM
WHAT HIS PLATFORM IS GOING TO BE

Renews His Pledges As To The State Finances,
Reorganization Of State Government, Banish-
ment Of Saloon And Cleaning Up Capital Hill

OPENS CAMPAIGN AT CENTRE HALL

Mr. G. A. Stewart,
Editor, The Progress,
Clearfield, Pa.

Dear Mr. Stewart:

You are the editor of a Republican newspaper, and I am the Republican candidate for Governor. I am anxious, therefore, that you keep me fully posted on my part in the coming campaign, and that is why I am taking the liberty of sending you this letter.

In accordance with an old Republican custom, I am going to speak at a political field day at Dorney's Park near Allentown on August 26th, but the formal opening of my campaign will not take place until the Grange Encampment at Centre Hall on September 7. From that time on I expect to be on the job until election.

Any plan of campaign must, of course, be subject to chance. As at present determined, the general plan is to cover as large a part of the State and as many counties as may be possible in the time available, laying emphasis, mainly, not on the great centers of population like Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, but on the small towns and rural communities, and upon those districts where Republican success may be in doubt.

Means What He Says.

One thing the people want to know about a candidate is whether he means what he says. I do, and my campaign this fall will be based squarely upon the pledges I made during the primary campaign. I promised, if elected, to let in the light and clean up the mess at Harrisburg, and I will.

On the stump I expect to give special attention to the financial reconstruction of the State, the reorganization of the State Government, and the elimination of the saloon, because these will be principal policies of the incoming administration.

The unofficial Committee on the Finances of Pennsylvania, which I appointed immediately after the primary, is vigorously at work, with the assistance of the best experts available in Pennsylvania and elsewhere in America, to secure a thorough knowledge of the essential facts about the present condition of the State's finances, and about the expending policies of the several Departments, and in assembling the material for a State budget. The latter I expect to submit to the Legislature early in the coming session. As you know, I am pledged to approve no appropriations which do not fall completely within the estimated revenues of the State.

The Budget System.

The reconstruction of the State Government will be a long, difficult, and complicated task. Preliminary examination of the plans of the Reorganization Commission appointed by Governor Sprout leads me to conclude that they cannot be accepted as they stand, but must be modified in important particulars. Such modifications will necessarily involve extended study. It will, therefore, be impracticable to submit to the coming session of the Legislature a complete plan for the reorganization of the State Government.

To delay action until the session which will meet in 1925 would be to postpone or lose very important advantages in efficiency and economy which otherwise might be secured. These advantages will not depend primarily on the elimination of unnecessary offices, which must take place whether a reorganization is made or not. They will be sought through greater efficiency and better results to be attained from the redistribution of existing organizations and existing personnel among the Departments. What is proposed to do will affect appointments in substance only as they would be affected whether the reorganization takes place or not.

Suggests Plan.

In view of the foregoing I suggest the following tentative plan: First, proposed changes which can be determined upon before the coming session of the Legislature, or during the session early enough to give chance for consideration, to be submitted to the Legislature for its decision. Second, the Governor to be given authority to continue the work between sessions, subject to review or reversal by the next Legislature. The authority so given should end with the opening of the legislative session of 1925, to which the Governor's action should be reported in full for its consideration.

The First Need.

The reorganization of the Government is absolutely essential before real economy can be secured, and before the extremely pressing question of centralization and home rule can be wisely settled. I am a strong believer in local self-government for cities, boroughs, townships and school districts, and as little dictation from Harrisburg as possible. Economy and home rule are of genuine importance. Hence this rather lengthy discussion.

In the matter of prohibition, practically all good citizens are agreed that the bootleggers must be driven out of business and the saloon must be eliminated. No argument is required on that.

Many other subjects, of course, will come up both for discussion in the campaign and for action by the new administration, but financial reconstruction, reorganization of the Government, and enforcement of law stand out from all the rest.

I am sure that I may count upon your help, not only during the campaign, but afterwards, in carrying these policies vigorously and effectively to completion. While I propose to make such a campaign as I would make if the election were greatly in doubt, I am not unduly anxious as to the outcome. What I do feel most strongly about is the work that must be done after election to put Pennsylvania on a sound financial basis, to make the State Government an effective and economical machine for the service of the people, and to enforce the law.

In these matters and in the others which will necessarily arise I recognize that success will be impossible without the support of the Republican press, and I earnestly hope I may have your full sympathy and cooperation in the difficult task ahead. In particular, I hope I may have the benefit of any suggestions or advice

Aged Woman Is Given Brutal Treatment By Daughter And Son

Mahanoy City, Pa., Aug. 24. (U. P.)—Huddled in the corner of a dark damp, dirty cellar, where she had been kept prisoner for two years an 85 year old woman was recently rescued by the police.

For no other reason apparently than that she was in the way the aged woman is alleged to have been forced in her cellar dungeon by her daughter and son-in-law.

With only rats and mice as her companions and starved almost to a living skeleton, the white haired mother lived from scraps of food that her children shoved into the cellar through a coal hole.

When the old woman was discovered by the police she resisted the officers, not realizing that she was to be taken from the underground prison to cozy and comfortable quarters.

Authorities at once started to investigate the case. The daughter and son-in-law were questioned severely but only shrugged their shoulders in Russian fashion and no definite information could be obtained from them.

The man and woman were placed under surveillance pending further investigation of the case, while the aged mother was taken to a more comfortable home and given medical attention.

Daily Thought.

Always remember that if the opportunity for great deeds never comes to you the opportunity for doing good deeds is renewed for day by day. The thing for us to live for is the goodness not the glory.—Farrar.

which you may be willing to give me and which I shall greatly appreciate. Sincerely yours,

GOVERNMENT MAKES BIG ROUNDUP OF "REDS" AND COMMUNISTS WHO MET IN SECRET CONCLAVE OUTSIDE OF CHICAGO

Bridgeman, Mich., Aug. 24.—Three prominent women radicals including Mrs. Rose C. Stokes and Ella Reeve Boor, accompanied William A. Foster, radical agitator, Boris Reinstein and Arnold J. Losovsky on their flight from here yesterday, police said.

The flight was made in a small plane, which was forced to land in a field near the town of Bridgeman. The plane was found to contain a large quantity of Communist literature and a list of names of persons who were to be arrested.

Evidence to convict hundreds of Communists throughout the United States is in the hands of authorities, it was said.

Bridgeman, Mich., Aug. 23.—The Government struck in its campaign against what Federal investigators declare is an international plot against peaceful functioning of American industry.

Directed from Washington by William J. Burns, chief of the United States secret service, four Federal inspectors, leading 20 deputy sheriffs, after lying in the hills near here for three days, swooped down on the international convention of the Communist party, held in a remote resort, and captured 15 leaders.

Sixty-one delegates, including William Z. Foster, head of the "one big union" movement, and M. Reinstein and P. Lokowsky, said to be personal representatives of Nicholas Lenin, escaped before the raid after a thrilling chase afoot and in taxi-cabs over almost impassable roads and tonight are being hunted by a swarm of secret service men, Michigan state trooper and the police of Michigan, Indiana and Illinois.

Reds and "Pinks" Taken
The arrested leaders, who include many of the best known names in radical and "Pink" circles in the country, were lodged in the Berrien county jail and truckloads of radical literature and correspondence which, according to the inspectors, indicates that the convention was working under direct leadership of Soviet Russia, was taken.

The raid, regarded as the most important coup of the Government against radicalism in years, was the culmination of months of patient waiting by the secret service men.

The Government knew of the proposed convention through its secret service. Operatives have been shadowing the Communist leaders for months, it is learned.

Last Saturday the Communist leaders began to gather in Chicago from all parts of the country and each arrival with a Government operative as his shadow.

Reds Take Alarm, Flee
Then it was learned that the preliminary convention was to be held in the Carl Wolfseel resort, hidden away in the woods near here.

Led by Sheriff George Bridgeman of Berrien county, 20 deputies laid in wait on the hills surrounding the wood-hidden resort from Saturday night until today. The Communists arrived, singly and in pairs until, last night there were 76 of them at the resort.

Sheriff Bridgeman communicated with the Federal inspectors who came from Chicago. Before they could arrive, however, outposts of the radicals according to deputies, got wind of the raid and the majority of the delegates escaped, plunging into the woods. Foster, Reinstein and Lokowsky are believed to have secured an automobile to Benton Harbor.

Man Hunt Is Started
When W. J. Burns, directing the raid by telephone from Washington learned of the escape of part of the delegates he telephoned Colonel Roy C. Vandercreek, commissioner of safety at Lansing, to send state troopers here. They arrived tonight and at once started a man-hunt through the dense woods and in nearby towns. Police at Chicago were notified to watch all radical persons there and every Federal agent in three states was instructed to be on the lookout.

The meeting here was to have been preliminary to a convention of the Trades Educational League, headed by William Z. Foster, and the National Workers' party, to have been held secretly in Chicago on Aug. 27-28.

Had Hand in Rail Trouble

"We have not had time to study all of the correspondence," said Jacob Spolanski, Federal operative, "but we have connected this aggregation with railroad strike troubles and to some extent with the wreck at Gary, Ind., where spikes were removed from the ties."

The alleged representatives of Lenin were to have offered financial assistance in furthering the Communist movement in America, according to another official.

Those in jail here are: C. E. Ruppberg, National executive secretary of the Workers' Party of America; Cleveland; William F. Dunne, labor editor of "The Workers," Communist paper; W. Reynolds, Detroit; Max Larnes, Seattle; Wash. Cyril; Langdon, Detroit; Francis Ashworth, Camden, N. J.; Alex. Vail, Philadelphia; Charles Krumbine, New York; T. R. Sullivan, St. Louis, said to be chairman of the executive council of the Workers' Party of America; John Mihalic, Kansas City; E. McMillin, St. Louis; Thomas O'Flaherty, New York; Calob Morrison, Chicago; C. Nordling Portland, Ore., and Charles Erickson, Chicago.

PHILIPSBURG GIRL HIKES 400 MILES IN KHAKI KNICKERS

Miss Clara Jackson, of North Philipsburg, has returned from a visit of four weeks to her aunt, Mrs. Van C. Jackson, of St. Louis. Much of the time was spent in hiking.

A party, consisting of Miss Jackson and Mrs. Keator, noted above, and Miss Billie Keator, of Scranton, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Keator, and their guest, Miss Ethel Bushy, of Mobile, Alabama, hiked to Philadelphia, Berlin, N. J., and Atlantic City, N. J. They visited Rev. J. E. Stanton, at Berlin, and Mrs. John Kline, at Kintnersville. Two days were spent in Philadelphia.

The hikers wore khaki knickers and middie, soft felt hats and red ties. The nights were spent at farm houses or hotels along the way. A number of photographs of places of interest were made by members of the party.

About 400 miles were covered, and Miss Jackson and the others in the party regard it as a great experience.

Enthusiasm, Enthusiasm is always connected with the senses whatever be the object that excites it. The true strength of virtue is serenity of mind combined with a deliberate and steadfast determination to execute her laws. That is the healthful condition of the moral life; on the other hand, enthusiasm even when excited to representations of goodness, is a brilliant but feverish glow which leaves only exhaustion and languor behind.—Kant.

Measure of Culture. Culture is not measured by the pretentious of the field which is covered by our knowledge, but by the nicety with which we can perceive relations in that field, whether great or small.—R. F. Stevenson.

Offshoot, as it Were. "If you really are connected with the Von Blewbludds, why haven't you a family tree?" "Well—ahem—to tell the truth, our family is only a branch."—Puck.

Daily Thought. We all of us exercise unconscious ministries. When we never dream we are affecting anybody we are touching and turning others all the time.—G. H. Morrison, D. D.

Might Have Known That Before. "When a man goes around looking for advice," said Uncle Eben, "about all he finds for certain is that opinions are bound to differ."

Their Makeup Must Differ. One drop of petrol will kill a wasp instantly, but if applied to a bee or a fly it will be quite ineffective.

STRIKING SHOPMEN
AT HOLLIDAYSBURG
RETURN TO WORK

The Altoona Mirror says:
Fifty striking employees of the Pennsylvania railroad at Hollidaysburg beat the Railway Labor board and the heads of the shop crafts to it in the matter of settling their differences. These men, tired of the idleness which they voluntarily subjected themselves to, have voluntarily returned to work. Thirty of them reported for duty yesterday morning. The men returned, not as former employees off on furlough, or leave of absence from any cause, but as new men.

This is the information gleaned from those in charge of the works department at Hollidaysburg. None have returned to the engine house, although the foreman there this morning informed a representative of the Altoona Mirror that there are openings there. The Hollidaysburg shops suffered more from the strike than any in this part of the State. More than three hundred left their jobs, crippling the work badly.

However, the shops did not close down. Necessary work was carried on by the loyal workers and some new men were added to the rolls. It was reported on a number of occasions that strikers had returned and made requests for their old places, but they were chary about accepting positions unless their seniority rights were restored. However, it is now reported they have returned and taken up their labors as new men.

The reports that the Hollidaysburg shops might be dismantled because of the action of so many of the men in striking seems to be without foundation in fact. Some of the machinery was moved, but for what reason, no one about the works there seems to know. The large yards at Hollidaysburg make it expedient to have repair shops there and while further extensions may be held in abeyance as a result of the strike, it is improbable they will ever be moved away and the chances for their extension look good.

Picketing about the Hollidaysburg shops ceased some time ago and a corps of extra railroad patrolmen which had been placed as a guard about the shops have largely been laid off or transferred to other places, so that while the shops are operating with somewhat depleted force yet, it is expected that within a short time, normal conditions will exist there. It may be also that some later agreement between the men and the company will restore, at least in part, the seniority rights of those who struck, repented and have returned to work.

Noticeable Resemblance.
"Isn't that a Bouguereau?" asked Mrs. Oldcast's as they stopped for a moment to look at the new pictures. "Oh, my no," replied her hostess; "it's a lion. But I told Josiah when he brought it home that it looked a good deal more like one of them things you mention."

WAS A BROKEN-
DOWN WOMAN

Then I Began Taking Lydia E.
Pinkham's Medicines

Donaldsonville, La.—"I write with pleasure to praise your medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—which has done so much to restore my health. I was a broken-down woman until my husband brought me a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and one of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. I had been having pains every month and at intervals between, was weak and seemed to be smothering at times, but in a week I felt like another woman. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. It did me a lot of good too. I cannot praise your medicines too much and will be more than glad to recommend them to any woman who is suffering from female troubles. You may print my testimonial, as it is true."—Mrs. T. A. LANDRY, 612 Miss. St., Donaldsonville, La.

Note Mrs. Landry's words—"as it is true." Every letter recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is genuine. It is a statement telling the merits of these medicines just as the women in your own neighborhood tell each other about them. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has sold on merit.

DISTRICT NO. FIVE MAY COME TO AGREE IN THE NEAR FUTURE

A coming break in the deadlock between the Pittsburgh Coal Producers' Association and District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, was forecasted yesterday by action of the former organization in authorizing its scale committee, which is directed to meet today, to re-establish the wages paid in the mines when the strike started, April 1, the wage scale on which the Cleveland settlement was negotiated.

The check-off question and the repeatedly announced refusal of the major producers' association of the Pittsburgh district to meet with the miners' union, except on the basis of a strictly district conference, still stand as barriers to a complete settlement of the strike in this district. Union officials, however, predict that no union miners will return to work until agreements are signed by the members of the operators' association.

As a result they further predict that, after the recognition of the scale decided on at Cleveland it will be but a short time until the Pittsburgh operators' association will agree to sign on a basis of the Cleveland agreement, including the check-off proviso.

A general increase in wages, ranging from 36 to 58 per cent for the various classes of labor in the mines and around the coke ovens in the Fayette region will become effective today, it was also learned yesterday. Independent operators in that region openly admitted the new scale, but the H. C. Frick Coke Company, major operator, refused to confirm the announcement.

The action of the Fayette operators will test the hold of the United Mine Workers on the members they have added to their organization in that district since the opening of the strike. The Fayette region was not organized originally, but since April 1, the union has made a determined drive to organize the field and as a result many mines have been closed by strikes of former non-union miners affiliating with the unions.

In announcing the new wage scale, the operators assert that they will continue to ignore the union. They express the belief that the new wage scale will draw back many of the men who struck last spring, despite non-recognition of the union. If not, they assert that the wages will prove sufficiently attractive to bring from

To Prevent Sea Disasters

C. S. Henslee, Chattanooga, Tenn., has invented a device to prevent sinking of ships which have been rammed or torpedoed. With the model above he shows how a rubber-edged steel cap is drawn against the hull by the suction of the water, the row of cone-shaped cups acting as a guide.

other sections all the workmen they need. The new Fayette wage scale is practically the same scale as was paid in 1920 and equals the highest scale ever paid in that region, operators say.

While the terms that will accompany the announcement of the Pittsburgh Coal Producers' Association return to the 1920-22 wage scale are yet to be decided by the scale committee in their meeting today, it is generally expected that the plan will be followed, as when the association announced more than a month ago that they were going to re-open their mines under President Harding's plan. At that time they addressed their announcement to the miners as individuals, not as union men.

Four mines in Washington county were reopened under troop protection.

PESKY BED-BUGS

(Pesky Devils Quietus) P. D. Q. is the new chemical that puts the ever-lasting to the Pesky bedbugs, roaches, fleas, ants and cockroaches—impossible for the pesky devils to exist where P. D. Q. is used.

Recommendations of Hotels, Hospitals, Railroad Companies, and other public institutions are a guarantee to the public that the safest, quickest and most economical way of eradicating the pesky insects is by the use of P. D. Q. This chemical kills the eggs as well as the live ones, and will not injure the clothing.

A 35c package makes a full quart, enough to kill a million bedbugs, roaches, fleas or cockroaches—and also contains a patent report to get the eggs nests in the hard-to-reach places and under furniture. P. D. Q. can also be purchased in sealed bottles, double strength, for $1.00.

Sold by Woodward & McPherson, and all leading druggists.

The gray wolf's distinction is that his scalp is worth five dollars, while that of the coyote brings only one dollar. Most of the distinctions are as worthless to those who hold them as the bounty on his scalp is to the gray wolf.

The Heart Lived In.
Faber has said, "A man's heart gets cold if he does not keep it warm by living in it." Love to others is not a matter of mere outflowing impulse. SAVINGS resulting from capacity manufacture are now offered to the buyer of the Studebaker Special-Six. The new price of $1275 is $200 under its former price.

Studebaker reductions became effective August 1st after Studebaker had completed the biggest seven months in its 70 years' history. And at a time when Studebaker had 15,000 unfilled orders on hand! It is a Studebaker policy of long standing to share manufacturing savings with the customer.

The performance, durability, comfort and quality of the Special-Six are recognized everywhere. And here's new proof of its endurance: Studebaker's sales of repair parts, covering accidents as well as service, for the first seven months of 1922 were less than they were for the first seven months of 1919, in spite of the fact that 186,000 new cars were sold and put into operation since January 1, 1920.

The Special-Six at $1275 represents a new standard of value—the greatest value Studebaker has ever offered, and that means a value that is positively unapproached anywhere in the industry.

INSIDE FACTS ON CLEVELAND CONFERENCE BY T. H. WATKINS

A telegram to President Harding, under date of August 14th, has been made public by Mr. T. H. Watkins of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation, who attended the Cleveland Conference, in company with two of the large Central Pennsylvania Producers, F. E. Herriman, President of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation and D. C. Morgan, of the Pittsburgh and Shawmut Railroad and Allegheny River Mining Company.

Withing twenty-four hours after this telegram was dispatched, the Central Competitive Field Conference, one of the chief causes of past quarrels, was disrupted, and the machinery established for an immediate resumption of mining and an exhaustive public investigation of the industry prior to April 1st next.

The Miners' policy committee and the Operators present, agreed unanimously on the principle set forth in the telegram, which reads as follows:

TELEGRAM

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 14th, 1922.
To the President,
The White House
Washington, D. C.

It is my judgement that a prompt settlement of the coal strike now hinges upon the issue of compulsory arbitration as against compulsory inquiry applicable to the fixation of a scale of wage to become effective April first nineteen twenty-three, when the contemplated provisional wage scales will expire.

It is admitted by both parties to this dispute that a method must be found not only to procure a prompt resumption of mining but to prevent a recurrence of this deplorable crisis.

It appears to be the opinion of many operators that the only effective way to guarantee the peaceful negotiation of the wage scales to become effective April first next is to secure from the United Mine Workers at this time a commitment to submit their case to arbitration and to bind themselves now to accept the award of arbitrations on April first next.

An agreement to accept arbitration for April first next cannot be secured from the United Mine Workers willingly in my judgement.

An agreement arising from an unwilling party is dangerous and not conducive to the future peace and harmony which is earnestly sought by all parties concerned.

The whole principle of compulsory arbitration is at variance with the traditions and spirit of American industry if not with the Constitution, just as present national strikes which deprive the public of the necessities of life are in violation of every elemental principle of civilization and fair play.

The question of compulsory arbitration in future disputes was exhaustively studied by the Roosevelt Anthracite Strike Commission of 1902, of which I had the honor to be a member.

The seven members of this Commission unanimously reported to President Roosevelt as follows:

"In order to secure the public against long-continued controversy and to make a coal famine or a famine in any other direction practically impossible we deem it essential that there should be some authority to conduct just such investigations as that you have called upon us to make."

There are some who have urged the Commission to recommend the adoption of compulsory arbitration so-called as the means of securing this desired result but we cannot see our way to recommend any such drastic measures. We do not believe that in the United States such a system would meet with general approval or with success. Apart from the apparent lack of constitutional power to enact laws providing for compulsory arbitration our industries are too vast and too complicated for the practical application of such a system.

"The public has the right when controversies cause it serious loss and suffering to know all the facts and so be able to fix the responsibility. In order to do this power must be given the authorized representatives of the people to act for them by conducting a thorough investigation into all the matters involved in the controversy."

"The chief benefit to be derived from the suggestion herein made lies in placing the real facts and the responsibility for such condition authoritatively before the people, that public opinion may crystallize and make its power felt."

After twenty years of subsequent experience in the coal industry I have no occasion to doubt the wisdom of this award, and on the other hand have had ample evidence of the turmoils, and ill-feeling and the breach of faith that are the aftermath of compulsory awards.

The proposal for Compulsory Inquiry advocated by the Roosevelt Commission of 1902 leaves both parties free to negotiate willingly on the basis of the recommendations of an impartial Commission which has had access to all the facts and whose published report has crystallized public opinion, which in the last analysis is the only compelling force in this country or any other democratic so-

It is my judgement that the limited conference to which I am not a party, now in session in Cleveland, should disband and that the operators from all districts here represented should immediately assemble and call on the National Scale Committee of the United Mine Workers to meet them and any other operators, and to negotiate an agreement containing both a provisional wage scale effective until April first, nineteen twenty-three, together with a provision for the appointment of a Commission of Inquiry composed of not more than seven impartial citizens of commanding public reputation for character and ability to make an exhaustive study of the whole industry and to transmit to you and the public prior to April first next its recommendations for the stabilization of the industry and the methods and bases of the coming wage scales.

If such an agreement can be consummated there is every reason to hope that reason and good faith can be restored in the coal industry, and that neither the operators or the miners will wish to deviate materially from the recommendations of this Commission or dare again to throttle the nation by depriving it of fuel. When the public, the miners and the operators are all fully apprised of the facts and the true conditions within the industry there will be no occasion for the exercise of force or compulsion in reaching future agreements. Should any wilful group, however, violate these principles after the public has been fully informed of the facts and advised as to the proper procedure within the industry, then the Government, with the unanimous support of its citizens can take such steps as are requisite to the public welfare.

The convictions expressed in this telegram are concurred in by other operators representing large and important interests who are now here with me.

I have good reason to believe that these views are concurred in by the United Mine Workers and that an endorsement by the majority of operators and the Administration of the principle of compulsory inquiry as laid down by the Roosevelt Anthracite Strike Commission would result in a speedy and sound settlement of the coal strike.

An immediate expression from you will be helpful.

THOMAS H. WATKINS
(Address) The Hollenden
Cleveland, Ohio.

Must Go on Forever.

Time is like a river made up of the events which happen; and a violent stream; for as soon as a thing has been seen, it is carried away, and another comes in its place, and this will be carried away, too.—Marcus Aurelius.

Worth While Quotation.

"There is a power in a habitual smile, not only because it wins friends and brings customers, but its influence over one's own life is immeasurable. The effort to be always cheerful, kind, when wars may be warring in the heart, has a great influence in transforming the heart."—Selected.

To Prevent Dampness.

In damp weather always place a small wooden box filled with lime in the storeroom. This keeps the air dry and sweet, as the lime absorbs all the dampness.

Training the Child.
There is a common belief that a child, when left alone, or to its own resources, is resting mentally at this time. He would remain a total stranger to the rest of the world, whereas he is like a traveler in life, who observes and comments upon everything that is new to him. He not only makes spontaneous effort to understand, but to imitate.—Doctor Montessori.

Two Things Life Taught Him

The longer I live the more I am satisfied of two things: First, that the truest lives are those that are cut rose-diamond fashion, with many facets answering to the many-planned aspects of the world about them; secondly, that society is always trying in some way or other to grind us down to a single facet.—Oscar Wendell Holmes.

Bringing Back Old Times.

My little daughter, one dark, rainy day, came indoors with a wet hair-stained kitten, and on remonstrating with her to take it out at once, she became indignant and said: "You don't be-member, mamma when you was a little cold cat yourself."—Exchange.

Granada.

Granada, the last of the Spanish provinces on which the Moors retained a hold, was trod from that alien race by the forces of Ferdinand and Isabella the same year America was discovered, 1492.

Soldiers Allowed Midday Nap.
In peace times soldiers in the Italian army are allowed two hours in the middle of the day for a nap.

Optimistic Thought.

A man's own good breeding is the best security against another's ill manners.

"My ancestors," haughty little Heloise Aldyno told her nine-year-old playmate Hermione McGuire, "came over in the first boat, the Mayflower." "Well, mine came over," Hermione said stoutly, her blue Irish eyes flashing with spirit. "In the very next boat, the Jukeboxer."—Judge.

Scrap Book Paste.
A simple and effective paste is made by covering the desired quantity of taploca with cold water, putting on the fire, and stirring. Add more water while it boils to make it of the consistency of paste. This can be used on wood, leather, paper, or rubber, and is especially good for scrap books and photographs.
